LUCILLE CAMERON JOHNSON WITNESS

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Superintendent Dinwiddie of the Chicago branch of the United States Bureau of Investigation, has reported to Washington that unless new evidence is discovered the Federal government can take no steps in the prosecution of Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, under the white slave law. The case seems to be entirely a state affair, he said.

The investigation by the Federal Grand Jury, however, continues, and today Lucille Cameron, the nineteen-year-old girl, who is charged with the abduction of Johnson, arrived in Chicago and was taken before the Grand Jury. Other witnesses followed her.

Employes of Johnson's cafe and others were summoned to tell what they know about the champion's alleged dealings in violation of the Mann act. A resolution is to be presented in the City Council this evening, which, if passed, will revoke the license under which Johnson operates.

Johnson is apparently losing control of himself. When subpoenas were served on attaches of the champion's resort, Johnson threatened Charles S. Erbstein, a lawyer, with violence, and Erbstein was forced to remain outside the place, surrounded by a thousand negroes, while the process servers were at work. Johnson declared in his anger: "There will be a charge of murder against Jack Johnson before I get through with this thing."

The witnesses were to tell theis stories to the jury in the case of Jeannette Dorr, growing out of the charges brought by Mrs. Cameron-Falconet in her attempt to prevent the fighter from marrying her daughter.

The girl is under $25,000 bonds to appear as a witness in this case. Johnson has offered to furnish the bonds. District Attorney Wilkerson, whom he called on the telephone and told he had the money ready, refused to accept it. Johnson's mother is among those summoned to appear today.

Johnson has just learned that his two pests in Australia with Sam McVey and Sam Langford, the Boston negro, have been called off by Hugh McIntosh, the fight promoter. McIntosh has notified his agent here to cancel all negotiations for the battles, for which Johnson was to have received $50,000.

Track Leader Defies State to Stop Racing

MINERAL SPRINGS, Ind., Oct. 22.—"The races will be run today. The regular crowds will be present. If the races are stopped it will be while the horses are in motion and by physical force."

This was the declaration of A. P. Knotts, president of the Mineral Springs Turf Association after a directors' meeting here this morning.

"This racing in question must be settled on legal lines," continued Knotts. "There has been no gambling and we can prove it. All we do know is that we are going to race."

$3,000,000 FOR BIG TERMINAL

The Boston port directors voted $3,000,000 today for work looking to the construction of a "first-class, modern ocean and railroad terminal at East Boston."

This is the second slice off the $9,000,000 originated to the Port Directors with which to improve and develop Boston harbor. The first appropriation was $2,500,000 for improving Commonwealth Docks.

It is not expected that the $3,000,000 appropriated today will be sufficient to finance the mighty project now ordered at East Boston.

The board does not appropriate more at this time because it needs the balance of the $9,000,000 for other development purposes.

It is proposed to go as far as possible with $3,000,000, and then look to the Legislature or other sources for the completion of this individual undertaking.

SHOW SHORTAGE IN UNION FUNDS AT DYNAMITE TRIAL

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 22.—The government's exposure of how the Ironworkers' International funds were juggled was continued in the dynamite conspiracy trial in the Federal Court today. Mary Dye, sweetheart and private secretary to J. J. McNamara, and bookkeeper at International headquarters, is testifying that a $12,000 discrepancy appears in the union books. The amounts of the individual shortages range from $100 to $400. This money was parceled out by McNamara as "advances" to defendants Herbert S. Hockin of Detroit, Frank C. Webber of New York, McManigal, J. B. McNamara and others of the deefndants. The government expects to show that this money was spent for dynamiting.

BELGRADE, Oct. 22.—Servian soldiers won another victory over the Turks today, when they captured Rejanik in the Kumanovo district at the base of a spur, after bombarding the place in severe artillery fire for several hours.

Adrianople Surrounded.

VIENNA, Oct. 22.—Fighting between Bulgarian and Turkish soldiers before Adrianople began attended by heavy casualties. Censored dispatches from Sofia said the Bulgarians still were advancing, and it is believed the city is completely surrounded.

Big bodies of troops and artillery were massed on the heights south of the city to keep the railway line to Constantinople open and to prevent the cutting of telegraphic communication.

The fighting around Kirk Kilisseh was particularly severe. Several batteries of the Bulgarians' heaviest artillery were concentrated within easy range of the Turkish works there, and for six hours a steady fire was poured on the Ottoman soldiers.

The heavy cannonade did much damage. When the Turkish guns were silenced the defenders fled to the inner works and the Bulgarians pressed forward, taking possession of the evacuated trenches and the abandoned artillery.

May Force Dardanelles.

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 22.—The Greek fleet is preparing to force the Dardanelles, and has occupied the Gulf of Madros as a base of operations. Victory in the Dardanelles would be a vital blow to Turkey and warlike action there might result in allied action by the Powers.

MELROSE LOST MAN A SUICIDE

With his throat cut and a razor with which the deed is supposed to have been done near by, the body of Hosea D. Littlefield, for whom posses have been searching in Melrose since his disappearance on last Friday morning, was found lying in a clump of bushes today about fifty feet from Spot pond brook and within a few feet of where the search began. The body was found by Andrew C. Littlefield, a son of the dead man.

Medical Examiner Roscoe D. Perley said that Littlefield committed suicide, and gave as his opinion that the deed was done soon after the man left home Friday morning. He ordered the body removed to Clark's undertaking rooms in Melrose.

The body was found in plain sight of Littlefield's home.

Case is Still Mystery.

The opinion of the medical examiner that Littlefield killed himself soon after leaving home starts another mystery for the Melrose police to solve. On Friday afternoon residents of Melrose Highlands saw an apparently demented man examining a razor.

This same man, it is claimed, showed up at several farmhouses Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. He said he had three carloads, averaging thirty tons, for sale.

Eugene W. Mitchell of No. 188 Eutaw avenue, Lynn, a conductor on the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad, was acquitted today in the Lynn court of a charge of maintaining a gambling nuisance. The complaint was Jefferson H. Parker, assistant secretary of the Watch and Ward Society. Following his acquittal, Mitchell declared that he would file suits against Parker and the society.

Agents of the society testified that on different occasions they went into a place alleged to be conducted by Mitchell, and there saw crap games and a roulette wheel in operation. Mitchell proved that on one of the dates in question he was on his way home from Maine and had registered at a Portland hotel.

H., Navy Yard, ordered a bulldog for the gunboat Eagle to whip his dog, has been ordered by Acting Secretary of the Navy Winthrop. "Dear Sirs—A public service might be rendered by your members if they would report imperfections in the street pavements to the complaint office of the public works department.

ROOSEVELT IS BACK IN HOME

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Whether or not Colonel Roosevelt will be able to resume campaigning is still undecided by his physicians, according to a bulletin from them issued at progressive headquarters today. The bulletin follows:

Colonel Roosevelt has stood the journey well, but, of course, is tired. His wound is still wide open. Rest and quiet are essential to him to avoid the possibility of wound infection. He will be unable to see anyone today or tomorrow. While Colonel Roosevelt is extremely anxious to take up the work of the campaign at the end of this week, we are not willing to say at this time that it will be possible.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Swinging his hat in happiness, Theodore Roosevelt came home from Chicago today. The ex-President, still carrying the bullet that was fired into his body last Monday night in Milwaukee, arrived in good condition, and is now installed in his favorite room on the second floor of the Roosevelt home at Sagamore Hill.

The last stage of the journey, from New York to Sagamore Hill, was traveled by special train and automobile. The train over the Long Island Railroad was made up of the Colonel's private car, carrying himself and family, and the car carrying the newspaper correspondents who accompanied the party from Chicago.

The plan had originally been for Colonel Roosevelt to leave his car at Oyster Bay, but this was changed when Mrs. Roosevelt heard that a large crowd had gathered there to welcome the Colonel. She asked the Long Island railroad officials to stop the train at Syosset, which is the same distance as Oyster Bay from Sagamore Hill.

This request was granted, and word was sent ahead to have the automobile which had been sent to Oyster Bay station to proceed to Syosset. The train arrived there at 9:30 o'clock. News of the change of plan had preceded the train, and about fifty persons had gathered.

Colonel Roosevelt walked down the steps of his car unassisted and exclaimed:

"I feel fully glad to get home."

Six armed guards were stationed on the Roosevelt grounds this afternoon and entrance to the property was forbidden to all who had no appointments.

YOUR LAST CHANCE?

(See page 2—Columns 1 and 2)

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The defence in the trial of Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker brought its attempt to prove his innocence of the murder of Herman Rosenthal to an end at 12:03 o'clock this afternoon, after making a final effort to show a conspiracy to perjure the policeman's life away on the part of Jack Rose, "Bridgy" Webber, Harry Vallon and Sam Schepps.

LAST EFFORT BY DEFENCE.

The defence ended its case with its sturdiest blow in behalf of the accused police official. Charles Reich, a brother of Jack Sullivan, whose real name is Jacob Reich, came to the witness stand and testified he had visited Jack Rose in the West Side prison and had there talked with Rose and Webber and his brother. He declared the gamblers had tried to persuade Jack Sullivan to corroborate the story of their shooting and its alleged motives. Reich asserted that Rose offered to get immunity for Sullivan and added that Rose said he did what he did to save Himself.

"Rose said," according to the witness, "he had told the District Attorney that Sullivan saw Lieutenant Becker in the second street after the murder and that Jack ought to go through with it to make it stick."

Reich added that Webber had appealed to him to see if he couldn't "do something" with his brother and "get him to corroborate us."

Fails to Get Witnesses Back.

He declared Webber urged Sullivan to make affidavit that Sullivan would not be a witness against Becker.

Attorney McIntyre then addressed the court:

"Your honor, we now ask that Rose, Webber, Vallon and Schepps be recalled for cross-examination, upon the ground that certain facts have come to the knowledge of counsel since they were dismissed from the stand, about which counsel did not know when they were on the stand."

The court refused to permit the recall, and then Mr. McIntyre said:

"The defence rests, your Honor."

Justice Goff then said he would permit the recall of Louis Pitt and Jack Sullivan for the purpose of showing conspiracy. He said:

"There seems to be some unsettled testimony with reference to an alleged conspiracy between Rose, Webber and Allen. I will allow Pitt and Sullivan to be recalled for the purpose of cross-examination on that particular point."

The lawyers for the defence rested their case without putting Becker on the stand. They feared the terrific cross-examination he would have been subjected to.

Jack Sullivan came smilingly to the stand. His levity, however, was nipped in the bud by the court.

"When you were on the stand before me," said Justice Goff, "you were very disorderly, and your manner was very offensive. I warn you now that that must not be repeated. Your conduct was then offensive because of your manner and your explosive utterances."

The witness started to say something, but was cut short by the court.

Sullivan on Stand.

Sullivan's recall caused a wrangle between counsel for the defence and the prosecution. Attorney John W. Hart desired permission to ask questions which the court had ruled out when Sullivan was on the stand last week. The court would not grant it, and when Hart refused to question the witness Assistant District Attorney Shaw was ordered by the court to interrogate Sullivan in behalf of the defence.

With an air of insolence Sullivan at once began his story without even waiting for questions.

"Rose, Vallon and Webber told me in the council room," cried Sullivan in a loud voice "that they had a stipulation and that they would go clear if they would turn upon Becker. I said to Rose, 'Why, you bald-headed ——!'"

Joe court checked the witness before the oath was finished.

"I insist that he be allowed to make the statement," said Mr. McIntyre.

"I said to Rose," burst out the witness, "'Why,' you bald-headed —— ——. Is that all you have got to do; to frame up people?' He replied that self-preservation was the first law of nature. They asked the

ELLIOTT SEEKS WIFE AND CHILD

Alfred Elliott of Lynn, one of the most active labor unionists in that city, is trying to find his wife and their little daughter, Beatrice. The mother and child, Elliott says, left his sister's home in Revere on Sept. 27. He thinks they are now in Chicago. He has asked the police to locate them and has learned from detectives, he says, that they were in Chicago two weeks ago.

The Elliotts were married thirteen years ago at the Church of the Advent in Boston. His was then a student at Tufts Medical, but gave up his studies on account of poor health. He is now in the cutting room at Harney Bros.' shoe factory in Lynn.

Mrs. Elliott was formerly a dressmaker in Lynn. Elliott says she made from $30 to $40 a week.

The family lived last at No. 68 Hamilton avenue, Lynn. They moved September 24. Mrs. Elliott and Beatrice went to the home of Mrs. Henry Gandette, No. 187 Washington street, Lynn, while Elliott was seeking a tenement. Elliott says that, two days later, when he went to tell his wife he had found a place he learned that his sister had moved to Revere. He went to Revere and was told, he says, that his wife had taken the little girl and had gone to visit relatives in Connecticut.

Elliott now declares that he traced his wife, by means of her trunk, to Malden and Lowell, and that she, with the child, boarded an express for the West on September 27 at Lowell.

to testify that Becker was with them at Forty-second street and Sixth avenue shortly after Rosenthal was stabbed.

"They told me they had told Whitman and had banked on me to corroborate them. 'We are all Jews,' Rose said to me, 'and what do we care for that Dutch ——?' If you want to stay in jail you can take your choice."

"Said They 'Framed' Becker."

Asked what he had overheard Rose, Webber and Vallon talking about among themselves, Sullivan said:

"They said they had framed Becker. I wanted to know how they had framed him. They said they had framed him for the Rosenthal murder. Rose said to me: 'You had better corroborate us. It is the only way for you to get out. We know you had nothing to do with it, and Whitman knows we wanted to sign an affidavit that you were as innocent as his baby. But he wants you to corroborate us. You send for Whitman or Moss and corroborate, or you will be indicted.'

"I told them it would not swear any man's life away for all the freedom in the world. Then they said, 'Well, it was not our idea to mention you at all, but Whitman wants you to corroborate us.' Webber told me he would give me $25,000 to buy a hotel, and we would share the profits, but he said, 'For God's sake, corroborate us.'

"Then they said if I had known about the murder it would never have happened. I said, No, you got me in on false pretenses. You told me it was about 'dead men tell no tales' for me. That is the reason you didn't let me in on it.

"Webber told me to name my own price.

"On August 9 a letter came to Rose from the district attorney's office. He answered this and then Webber called me into his cell. He said: 'Here is a letter from Whitman and if you don't corroborate us you will be indicted.' I wrote back to Whitman to call me down there to his office. Then they told me I had better go down and see Moss, but I told them I had a lawyer representing me. I told them they could not advise me. I would not swear away any man's life. I would rather go to jail for six years. I would not do it for anything in the world."

The question whether Becker should take the stand was undecided when Justice Goff reconvened court today. Mr. McIntyre said he had only six more witnesses and probably could close the case today. He made the statement as to Becker's testifying, but the indications were the attorney would have his own way about it.

"I think if I took the stand, my testimony would clarify the atmosphere somewhat," declared the accused lieutenant. "It would enable the jury to give the testimony of Rose, Schepps, Webber and Vallon their real value. But I am not a lawyer and will be guided by the advice of my counsel."

Policeman on Stand.

Before taking of testimony began, Mr. McIntyre introduced a copy of the minutes of the Kings County Court, showing Morris Luban, a witness for the State, who had identified the former policeman had been convicted of a crime. This was admitted.

John J. Dougherty, a policeman, who was present at the raid of Herman Rosenthal's place on April 17 last, was called. He admitted seeing Mrs. Rosenthal and Becker in conversation at the time of the raid, but declared the woman had spoken to Becker asking him not to arrest her nephew, who was working in the gambling house.

Dougherty swore Max Margolies, the newspaper man who testified against Becker, was on the sidewalk outside the Rosenthal house at the time of the raid. Margolies had sworn he was inside when the raid was made.

John B. Maher, a theatrical man and former county detective, was called to refute the Rose and Webber story that Becker had told them at Luchow's restaurant on the night of July 9 that he wanted Rosenthal "croaked."

DAKOTAN SIGNED "J. D. RUSSELL"

The defence in the Russell will case played its trump card today at East Cambridge when lawyers for the Russell estate introduced the application of Dakota Dan in 1901 for admission into the order of Woodmen of the World at Minneapolis. In this paper Dakota Dan signed his name as James Daniel Russell, and the paper made him say that he had three brothers and four sisters. It was claimed by the defence that Dakota Dan is J. D. Russell and that he transformed his last name later to Russell.

Dakota Dan admitted that his signature appeared on the application.

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

When Dakota Dan walked into the East Cambridge court house today to resume his legal fight to show that he is Daniel Blake Russell and not the infamous imposter that William C. Russell swears he is, he might have quoted, if he were given to literary daring, the following stanza:

Though the wills of God grind slowly,
Yet they grind according small;
Though with patience He stands waiting,
With exactness grinds He all.

Events of stirring import have been taking place during the past two weeks—the world's series, the Ettor trial, the Becker trial, the Balkan war—yet quietly in Cambridge a big, boyish-looking man, with the rough and ready speech of the Dakota Bad Lands, has kept quietly contening for his name.

Problem for Scientists.

All of the passions that marked the great events mentioned are concentrated in this fight, standing, as it does, as the most unique controversy of its kind this country ever saw.

Does the blood of the late Senator Daniel Russell and the late Mrs. Daniel Russell course through the veins of Dakota Dan?

Some day science will have advanced so that this question might be answered. In the quiet of the laboratory it will be possible for the blood expert to take a few corpuscles from one man and a few from another and tell if they are brothers.

At least, Jules Verne, if he were alive, would say so, and most of the things he saw in imagination have come true.

The Dakotan was the first person directly connected with the case to come into court. He was in court ten minutes before 10 o'clock. He wore a blue serge suit and dotted bine bow tie. He said that he felt in excellent spirits. There was not the shadow of a disposition on his part to falter in the seemingly endless fight.

But even early as was the Dakotan, he was preceded by a phalanx of Cambridge friends who would stand martyrdom for the faith that is in them. Among the Hattie Coombs, they grouped themselves in the front rows of seats so that they directly faced the witness.

Sir Scharton Appears.

William R. Scharton, the legal knight as well as the legal light, who volunteered to lead the Dakotan in his fight legally, walked into court. He had a talk with Dakota Dan. Robert Nason, Eugene C. Upton and Ferdinand C. Alley came into court and the Dakotan took the witness stand. Mr. Nason had in his hand a transcript of the claimant's testimony at the last trial and he proceeded to read portions of that testimony and ask the witness whether he had so sworn.

And then he read:

"What is your brother's name?"

"William Clifford Russell."

"Did you testify so?"

"I said 'Clifford,' I must have made a mistake."

The real middle name of the elder brother is Clifton.

Mr. Nason read:

"Do you know your brother's age?"

"I do."

"What is his age?"

"He was born on June 14, 1857."

"Did you say that?"

"Fifty-seven," said Dakota Dan. "No. Fifty-eight. I had no reason to say fifty-seven."

Scharton Protests.

Mr. Nason read Dakota Dan's description of his brother as given at the last trial.

"That's exactly right," said Dakota Dan.

Mr. Nason read a long excerpt from Dakota Dan's testimony relative to who worked in his father's office. The transcript of his testimony made Dakota Dan say: "Stanford" instead of "Stafford" and "Charlie Jones" instead of "John W. Jones."

Mr. Scharton made a protest against this sort of hair-splitting inquiry on the ground that there was nothing to show that the stenographer had not made a mistake.

Flynn testified that Caruso told him and the other officers that he was in a poolroom on Common street when the riot broke out on Union street which resulted in the woman's death. Caruso told the officers that a man came rushing in and said:

"The police are killing all the Italians."

Caruso told the police that Scuito ran out with a big club and another man left with a cleaver, but that he remained in the poolroom, not wishing to have any trouble.

Detective Flynn, under cross-examination, denied any unnecessary delay in searching for Salvatore Scuito, indicted as the man who fired the shot that killed the woman. He explained that it took at least two weeks to establish the identity of the fugitive.

"I don't see why I'd say Clifford instead of Clifton or Stanford instead of Stafford when I wrote down those names, in North Dakota as I was requested to do by my counsel. I also knew John W. Jones and I would not call him Charlie. I'll bring the book to court if you want it. It's in my trunk."

"Is the trunk locked?" casually inquired Mr. Scharton.

"Don't put that in," answered Master Fevey.

Mr. Scharton characterized this sort of examination as "far fetched." He said it would never get them anywhere.

The first meeting of Dakota Dan with William C. Russell at a Boston law office in the presence of Mr. Alley was brought out today. The Dakotan said:

Meeting of Brothers.

"When I saw Willie, Almy said: 'You don't know that man,' and Willie dropped his head and said, 'No.' I asked Willie if he didn't remember when I left home and about what mother said about the money, and Almy said: 'Of course, he doesn't remember it.'

Hall Caine's Masterly Novel
"The Woman Thou Gavest Me"

This serial is the most talked of story of the season. It has to do with the rebellion of a young girl against the efforts of a reckless father to sacrifice her to social ambitions and blight her life, as he did her mother's.

Its absorbing plot and sustained interest equals and even exceeds "The Christian" or "The Eternal City" by the same author. You cannot afford to miss this great story.

Policeman Bitten by Dog and Loses Leg of Trousers

Back of the case of James Glynn, who was adjudged guilty of larceny in the Dorchester District Court today, is a story of how Patrolman Thomas W. Chisholm of Dorchester station was bitten by a bull terrier when making the arrest. He lost a trouser leg. Arthur Kelly of Vaughan street, Dorchester, who was with Chisholm, also was bitten. Chisholm went into a shanty in the rear of No. 27 Geneva avenue, to arrest Glynn, who had been employed by Mrs. Margaret Kelly, Arthur's mother, in delivering a load of coal. Mrs. Kelly contracts to furnish wagon drivers for a coal company. Glynn collected $10 and failed to report to Mrs. Kelly. The patrolman, in citizen's clothes, was attacked by the dog, which nipped his legs and tore his trousers.

Bresnahan, Canned as Cards' Leader, Refuses to Quit

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 22.—Roger P. Bresnahan was called before the owner, president and attorney of the Cardinals baseball team today and discharged as manager of the team, in so far as those in authority could discharge him.

Although he holds a five-year contract with the club, one year of which he has served, he was told that his services were not wanted longer. Mrs. Helen Hathaway Britton, the owner of the majority interest in the club; J. C. Jones, president, and Lon Hocker, attorney, were present when Bresnahan was discharged.

A man close to those in control of the team declared Bresnahan would not step out, and would make a fight in the courts to compel the club to respect his contract, which calls for a salary of $20,000 a year and 10 per cent. of the net profits for Bresnahan.

When Bresnahan was told he was not wanted he cited his contract. Then the club officials offered to make any reasonable settlement with him. The meeting, it is reported, virtually broke up in a row, and there will be another conference to determine what course shall be pursued.

Live up to these conditions and the nerves, brain, stomach, kidneys, heart and liver will keep in perfect working order. It is not new nerve tissue that is needed, but plenty of nourishment. Anything that you can do to build up your general health will strengthen your nerves. You will find Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People the greatest help. Free from any harmful or habit-forming drug, they start to work at once cleansing and enriching the blood, strengthening the stomach and carrying nourishment to every nerve, tissue and tiny cell throughout the body. Why not choose health now by giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a thorough trial?

Mrs. F. G. Gardner, of No. 3 Seely street, Adrian, Mich., says: "I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after I had given up all hope of ever having my strength back again. I became run down through overwork and worry. I was in bed and helpless for two weeks. My limbs from my knees down felt numb and I had no use of them. I had terrible pains in the top of my head and creeping sensations in the back of the neck. All summer and fall I doctored. We gave up housekeeping and boarded, as I thought I would gain faster, yet many mornings I could not go to breakfast for I would wake up feeling so faint and light-headed. Then I made up my mind to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I began with them and gradually increased the dose until I was taking three pills after each meal. I used the pills until my nerves were steady, my appetite and sleep good and I felt entirely well. My daughter has since taken the pills for thin blood and poor color with good results."

Write for the free booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are highly recommended for neurasthenia or nervous debility, neuralgia, sciatica, nervous headaches and St. Vitus' dance. Y.

Soap and Water Langtry's Beauty Rule

Titled Actress Looks Half Her Years; Calls American Women the Best Dressed.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Lily Langtry's beauty-secrets? "Ah, there ain't no secret," as our small brother would say.

Lily is certainly beautiful—there isn't a question about it—but she declares that there is absolutely no "secret" to it, and she said that in front of four inquisitive, industrious and vivacious newspaper people, all tugging their hardest to get that "secret" out of her.

"I don't do a thing but keep my face clean," she declared. "No massage, no beauty or lotions and no marvelous sorts of baths. Just soap and water—they're the best beautifiers I've ever discovered."

But just the same, I don't believe a word of it. I know heaps of people who keep their faces clean, but—well, anyway, when a woman over sixty can look not a day over thirty there's some secret somewhere. Perhaps Lily wouldn't want to know that she's over sixty, and it really is as hard to believe that she is as it is to believe that she has no beauty secrets —perhaps she's the one woman in a million who can keep a secret. She certainly keeps it, and it isn't fair.

Would you like to know what this marvel of marvels looks like? Well, she's tall and exceedingly well proportioned, with great, large, clear blue eyes, oh, such expressive ones! and that metallic gold colored hair which she parts at the side and gathers in a simple knot at the back; the prettiest mouth you'd ever want to look at and such teeth! When she smiles you're gone, and you can't for the life of you say just which it was that caught you, the twinkle in the eyes, the wonderful curve of the lips or the gleam of her wonderful teeth.

Talks of Our Blue Laws.

Mrs. Langtry is this week playing at B. F. Keith's Theatre in a sketch "Helping the Cause." This is her farewell tour of America, but no doubt she'll come again. That's a secret, too.

When I saw her in her dressing room at the theatre she was ardent in voicing her opinion of a place with such rigid blue laws as Boston where they would give entertainments on Sunday evenings—and she nearly convinced me that Boston was a pretty poor sort of a city.

"You people talk and preach about keeping the Sabbath holy and what do you do? You keep a lot of people working seven days in the week just for the enjoyment of a few others. Don't you suppose actors and actresses and stage hands are human and want to rest on the seventh day as well as any one else?" I wondered if she thought me responsible.

"I think it's disgraceful and certainly didn't expect to find these conditions existing in straight-laced New England. It isn't that I think there is anything wrong in people witnessing a performance on Sunday evening, but I do think it's wrong to make the people who entertain them work on this day on which they are supposed to rest."

She was terribly indignant about it, there's no question, but when she had finally said all she had to say about that and realized how much she had said she smiled one of her radiant smiles, which had an interesting tinge of apology about it, and in reply to the question as to what indifference she noticed between Americans and Europeans she graciously replied:

"The only difference I notice is that the American women are so much better dressed." Now wasn't that a slice of her? "Every time I see a particularly stunning looking woman over there I always know immediately that she's an American. There are no women in the world who dress so well as the women of this country.

"How about the French women; aren't they supposed to be the best dressed women in the world?"—fler graciousness was too overwhelming—we couldn't believe she meant it.

"They can't compare with the American woman. They have as good clothes as the American woman, but the American woman wears them better. The American woman carries her clothes like a queen, and in gowning has no equal."

What Men Most Admire.

That rather evened things up after the severe criticism of our "blue laws" and we all settled down peacefully once more and proceeded with the interview.

She was next asked what quality men liked best in women. That seemed to amuse the fair Lily and she replied, rather abruptly:

"That's something no one can say; some men like one thing and some men another. You only have to look at the types of futile it would be to lay your finger on any one quality.

It's true that it isn't always the beautiful women men love most. Beauty counts but little. Charm, no doubt, counts more, while tact and a good disposition are other things in some women's favor.

"But then again while one man would like the meek little mousy type of woman, another man admires most the woman who flies the fits of temper and is strongly emotional. So what can one say?"

Reverting to the subject of the difference in Americans and Europeans, Mrs. Langtry claims that they are becoming so much alike that it is difficult to find any distinguishing feature save the superiority of style of the American woman.

"Suffrage? Yes. I believe in it to a certain extent, but I can't see where all these militant methods are going to gain anything for the cause. I think that they are getting along very nicely without the aid of the women in politics, but if she really feels that she won't be happy till she gets it, I have no objection to giving the vote to her. Give her anything she wants.

I don't believe that woman's only sphere is in the home, by any means. She should have as many interests outside the home as it's possible for her to have. The more, the better. They'll keep her young. I don't mean that she should neglect her family for other things, but neither should she sacrifice her life for her family.

Suspender Skirts.

And just as we were preparing to leave she asked us if we had seen the latest little suspender-skirt. And she proceeded to show us. There were the same kind of buckles as on men's suspenders, the regular straps over the shoulders and the little buckle at the back which holds in the gathers of the skirt.

The suspenders were of blue serge, the same material as her suit, and they certainly looked chic.

Mrs. Langtry wore a plainly tailored suit of blue, a rather large white beaver hat trimmed with a white plume low on the brim, and a white veil. Simplicity and becomingness were the two dominant features of her costume.

MRS. LILY LANGTRY, BEAUTY

LILY LANGTRY

LILY LANGTRY AT B. F. KEITH'S

Lily Langtry, who has been the belle and beauty, the marvel and envy of the stage every since the average young person in Boston can remember, was the cause of the crowded house at Keith's yesterday, as many people came from far and near to see this much-talked-about beauty on her farewell tour.

Mrs. Langtry (Lady de Bathe) appeared in a most amusing little sketch which brought out all the charm of her wonderful personality and give the audience a chance to gasp once more at her beauty. The comedy, which was written by Percy Fendall and Lady de Bathe, is entitled "Helping the Cause."

Mrs. Langtry, as Lady Victoria Vansleville, has been sent to prison for breaking a window in the cause of suffrage. She is sent to a cheerless cell, where the matron insists upon making her do scrubbing work as punishment. Lady Vansleville finds there is a young physician connected with the prison, and pretending illness, demands that he be sent to her. The charming suffragette proceeds to ensnare the unsuspecting young doctor, which part is skillfully played by Alfred Mansfield.

Much joy is the disposal of the matron, played by Mrs. Fleming, one gets in touch with the governor of the place, Sir Martin H. Sterne, played by E. Bevan, an exceptionally clever English actor. After that the world is hers for the asking.

Another feature of the program was the Comedy Shadowgraphist, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Darrow, in sand and smoke pictures. Rolland Wells, the European juggler and billiardist, was clever. Walter S. "Hube" Dickinson, ex-Justice of the Peace, kept the house in an uproar. Charles and Fanny Van, in their new laughalogue "From Stage Carpenter to Actor," made another interesting feature. The three Mori Brothers, the Japanese barrel jugglers, were for the first time, were well received, while the dancing wonders, Pat Rooney and Marion Bent were decidedly clever. Taylor Granville's "The Hold-Up," was most exciting. Percival Lennox, Jefferson Hall and Tom Ward proved themselves decidedly able actors.

My wife happened to see an ad. about Nerve-Ura in a Boston paper, She sent $1 for a box for me to try. I had but slit faith in any kind of medicine. The first box you sent was lost in transit, but I received another box on Wednesday last. I took one powder after dinner and one after supper. The results were marvellous. My wife, children and neighbors were surprised to see the change. I am much relieved—am able to walk better than I have for two years. MISS LEONARD IS RECAPTURED

The Boston and Worcester police have been notified of the capture in New York of Amelia M. Leonard, the insane "Girl Raffles," who escaped from the Worcester Insane Asylum three weeks ago after making threats against the life of Colonel William A. Gaston and others.

A Worcester officer was dispatched to bring the woman back to the asylum. Miss Leonard, who was sentenced to Sherborn for larceny of jewels from a woman she had nursed, was working in New York in the Hotel Vanderbilt.

When she appeared in New York about a week ago she showed the management a letter of recommendation from the Young Women's Christian Association, and was put to work at once.

No one about the hotel had any suspicion that she had either a criminal record or was insane. All were surprised when Sergeants Boyle and O'Hara of the West Thirtieth street station placed her under arrest.

WILLIAM M. WOOD, AMERICAN WOOLEN HEAD, IS FOR TAFT

William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, declared today that he is supporting Taft for re-election. Mr. Wood said that his company's business was the best he had ever experienced in his twenty-five years as a manufacturer. He said the increased business of his company was "a part of the great prosperity that is sweeping the country. I hope that it may be continued and fortified by the election of President Taft."

Replying to a report that he had been ill, President Wood said:

"Haven't time to be sick nowadays. Business is too good. Moreover, this is about nice months late. I had a bad cold in January."

LONESOME FUGITIVE BREAKS INTO JAIL.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 22.—Here's the story of a prisoner who broke out of jail, got cell-sick and then broke back in again. He is Fred Tupper, a "trusty." When Fred went he took Billy Donovan with him. When he returned, it was alone. Being thirsty, the men decided to break jail. They broke into a liquor store. They wanted a smoke and broke into another store. Donovan fell by the wayside and snored until the police woke him up. Tupper staggered back to the jail building and broke through a window, got inside and dropped off into a deep sleep. The police said Tupper when arrested several years ago had swallowed $15 which had to be recovered with a stomach pump.

ew Bedford Girl Fought a Burglar in Room at Colle

EW BEDFORD, Oct. 22.—How Miss Thornton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Thornton of No. 28 James street, this city, fought a man who entered her room at Beloit College, Wisconsin, became known here today.

Miss Thornton's father is a bookkeeper at the Mechanics' Bank. She is twenty years old and is a graduate of the New Bedford High School. She is a junior at Beloit, where she is known as Miss Helen Miller, a freshman, to keep the same room. Miss Miller awoke to find her head covered with bed cloth and reaching to pull them off she touched a man. She screamed and awoke Miss Thornton, who sprang from bed, grappled with the man. He dropped her toward the open window. Then other occupants of Emerson Hall heard the noise and rushed down the corridors. The man plunged through the window.

"Yes, I've heard of my daughter's heroism," said Mrs. Thornton, the girl's mother. "It was just like her. She is a brave girl. She is intensely interested in music

"DEEP PURPLE" AT ST. JAMES

To see "The Deep Purple" at the St. James Theatre is to get a deeper insight into the great trial in New York in which the "system" is being shown up. In addition to its dramatic worth, the Paul Armstrong play has a "news" value—a feature that isn't so often found in the drama. Hardly a spectator in the packed house which saw the show produced by the St. James stock company last night but who appreciated the light the play threws upon some of the happenings in the Rosenthal tragedy in New York.

"The Deep Purple" is woven about scenes and characters in the New York underworld. By the St. James actors it is thrillingly and splendidly performed. It is a play of thieves, crooks, confidence men, burglars, told with such power that not acridity so. There is a healthy atmosphere pervading the stage, and the feeling is instinctively given that behind the clouds is a silver lining.

There are lessons in the play too, and they are sent home with all the emphasis of strong acting. The play was superbly produced and excellently acted. The cast was well balanced. Miss Ruth Frankiyn as Prince Kate, was away above par. Miss Ethel Grey Terry, as a pure sweet girl, caught in the net of the underworld, won new laurels for herself. Charles Abbe, as "Pop" Clark, arch crook, have an unusually good bit of character acting.

WILLIAM CARLETON AND BLANCHE RING AT TREMONT.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Give her a song with a popular twist to it and an audience that is on fairly decent terms with itself, and Blanche Ring may be depended upon to do the rest. Which she did right merrily, and with overflowing effervescence at the Tremont last evening. Miss Ring sang and you whistled, and that was all there was to it—you paid money to get into the theatre and then entertained yourself whistling a perfectly silly tune.

"The Wall Street Girl" brought Miss Ring to the footlights in her best form—which goes both ways. The stage is so nearly barren of singing comediennes that you opened your arms wide for Miss Ring, and while it was plain that she had trained down to a whisper, she was still something of a load for any pair of arms. This jovial young woman, who appeared to be on intimate terms with everybody from the wide eyed youth in the gallery to her own leading man, gave "The Wall Street Girl" the benefit of a half dozen rollicking songs, backed by a good nature that was as broad as the Common. "The Wall Street Girl" needed Miss Ring and her songs, for it was a thin vehicle and would never have stood by itself. Miss Ring, taking the same view of it, kept herself in constant motion—and always toward her audience.

Songs Prove a Hit.

It mattered but little that Miss Ring was impersonating a smart young woman with mannish tendencies. What concerned everybody was whether her songs would be worthy of their singer. Miss Ring has never disappointed her audiences in that respect, and she registered emphatically last evening.

You found yourself leaning toward the stage when she began her evening's work with "I Should Have Been a Boy," and you were almost on your toes when she reached "I Want a Regular Man." When she reached "Whistle It" you were prepared for her invitation to join, and as you were never known to refuse this lady anything, you joined.

One of the joys of Miss Ring as a comedienne is her natural method of taking an audience by the hand and leading it into song. Before she had finished the first verse of "Whistle It" your lips became uneasy and restless and it needed only the coaxing smile of the singer to drag you into a willing response. The puckering became an epidemic and "Whistle It" came into its own as a regular number that will linger as long as Miss Ring remains at the Tremont.

Miss Ring's ample sense of humor stood by her nobly in "Dwelle-Dum-Ded," in which she was assisted by many strange voices from regions of the chorus. While the number was a success for Miss Ring, it was a triumph for the Pearls, Maisies and Madges of the singing contingent.

Mr. Rogers Impresses.

"The Wall Street Girl" offered a suitable background for Miss Ring and her company, but it was the interpolated numbers that gave the performance its distinction. Will Rogers, a comedy cowboy, dallied deftly with yards of rope and sprinkled his specialty with rippling observations. The audience was visibly impressed by Mr. Rogers, who turned a few simple rope tricks into an important feature of the entertainment.

William P. Carleton looked down upon Miss Ring from his unusual altitude and sang far out of her reach. He behaved himself admirably and appeared to enjoy himself. Mr. Carleton would make a fine leading man for the new custom house tower.

Miss Ring is nearly all there is to "The Wall Street Girl." She proved herself an industrious comedienne, worth meeting at any time.

When you go to "The Wall Street Girl" don't forget to take along your whistle—you'll need it.

"MAN OF HOUR" AT CASTLE SQ.

That George H. Broadhurst's political play, "The Man of the Hour," has lost none of its popularity among playgoers of this city, was proven yesterday afternoon and evening by the large and enthusiastic audiences at the Castle Square Theatre.

"The Man of the Hour" is a timely play full of dramatic incidents, telling a story of human interest. Every trick known to the political grafter was brought into view to make the new Mayor favor a bill which if signed by him would bring millions to the grafters and disgrace and hardship to the city.

George Henry Trader won every one's heart by his remarkable portrayal of the alderman and former chief of police who helped the courageous young Mayor to down the brutal boss. Walter Walker was forceful and realistic as Richard Horrigan, and Wilson Melrose gave an unusually luminous characterization of the young thoroughbred who defied the boss and the money power and won his fight and his sweetheart.

Miss Mary Young as Dallas Wainwright, the Mayor's sweetheart, and Miss Florence Shirley as Cynthia Garrison, the stenographer, both afforded ample excuse for the attentions of their stage lovers, and Miss Mabel Colcord, embodied with dignity and poserve, played the part of the mother of the young Mayor.

But the cherry good nature of Phelan when he warned Horrigan at the start, the fine human sympathy he displayed through the varied trials of the young folks, his rich and mellow tongue and his convivialve internal laugh when it "dropped" on Horrigan were the brief particular gems of the performance. The balance of the cast all played their parts well.

Waldron's Casino.

The new burlesque show at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday was "The Merry Maidens." They were all that—and more.

Gaiety Theatre.

Not often during the season in the burlesque patron gives a better run for his money than during the week that Dave Marion and his "Dreamland" burlesquers hold forth at the Gaiety Theatre. Mr. Marion moved into that house yesterday and it was like a jolly home-coming, for he was gladly welcomed. One of the most natural comedians on the stage, Mr. Marion gives burlesque a real standing as suitable entertainment for everybody. He is both artistic and funny, which is something of an accomplishment.

Globe Theatre.

The special treat for the patrons at the Globe Theatre yesterday was an act fresh from the higher priced vaudeville circuit—an act that played Boston only a few weeks ago at the big down town vaudeville house—the "Eight English Rosebuds." These lively English girls contributed a dancing number in the new bill at the Globe that easily marked them as head liners. Several other popular attractions were found on the list, including the Johnny Horne Choir, the Dancing Willists, Johnny Geiger, Boyle and Brazil and a half dozen others. Since the Globe has joined the United Booking family and drawn its features from the big-time circuit, no better vaudeville has been shown in any theatre.

New Palace Theatre.

Continuing its policy of supplying its patrons with the biggest and most sensational of European picture novelties, "Saint George and the Dragon" was offered as the big event in the new bill at the Palace Theatre yesterday. This picture represents the last word in motion photography on a large scale, and the stirring scenes, dazzling spectacles and dramatic incidents in the story of St. George were graphically shown to the delight of several capacity audiences. Of course, there were other pictures on the program, but "St. George and the Dragon" was alone worth the price of admission.

National Theatre.

As an echo of the recently departed ball season, the Red Sox quartette appeared in the bill at the National Theatre yesterday. Nothing could have better served to crowd the theatre than these popular ball players, who gave an ample demonstration that playing baseball does not impair the voice. The boys scored an immediate hit with the day's audiences. Bert Levy, the cartoonist, was another attractive feature of the bill. Mr. Levy's brisk conversation while making pictures is always diverting.

Grand Opera House.

"Ironie's Daughters" was just the kind of a burlesque show to keep things moving briskly at the Grand Opera House yesterday. There were many amusing moments in the entertainment.

ATTRACTIONS AT THEATRES

Orpheum Theatre.

The new program at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday was headed by Louise Agnese and her Irish colleens. The girls were both good looking and musical, and their Irish songs caught the popular fancy. Other vaudeville novelties and new pictures completed an attractive bill.

Hub Theatre.

New vaudeville features and several motion pictures that have never before been seen in Boston made up the program at the Hub Theatre yesterday.

Scenic Temple.

The regular Monday changes in the bill at the Scenic Temple yesterday brought several vaudeville novelties and new motion pictures to that house.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The Girls from Joyland" moved into the Old Howard yesterday and gave a lively entertainment. A number of bright vaudeville features were also included in the bill.

Forthcoming Bills.

"Butterfly Baroset" will be Mr. Craig's offering at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

A monster benefit for the Henry B. Harris Home for Stage Children will be held in the Boston Theatre Tuesday afternoon, October 29.

The St. James Theatre company will produce Clyde Fitch's merry farce, "The Blue Mouse," next Monday.

Attractions that Remain.

"Robin Hood" is now on its final week at the Boston Theatre.

Rose Stahl and "Maggie Pepper" entered upon a new week at the Park last evening.

"The Quaker Girl" continues its merry, musical way at the Colonial.

"Little Boy Blue" is enlarging large audiences at the Majestic Theatre.

"Coming Home to Roost" is now on its second week at the Hollis Street Theatre.

George Arliss and "Disraeli" remain at the Plymouth Theatre.

The convict ship Success continues to interest sight-seers with its weird relics.

Violet Mascotte's "Devil Girl" continue as the main feature of the bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre.

PROBE OPPOSITION TO CHURCH MERGER; COMMITTEE NAMED

Opposition that has developed against the proposed merger of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church and the Bowdoin Square Tabernacle is to be probed by a committee consisting of President George E. Horr of Newton Theological Seminary, the Rev. Charles H. Moss of Malden, the Rev. Walter Calley of Jamaica Plain, the Rev. Woodman Bradbury of Cambridge and Dudley P. Bailey of Everett.

The committee was named after the committee of twenty-one of the Baptist Council had failed to reach an agreement. The three churches interested—the Warren Avenue, the Bowdoin Square Tabernacle and the First Baptist Church, on Commonwealth avenue—were represented by their respective clergyms, the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, D. D., the Rev. Frederick E. Heath and the Rev. Austin K. DeBlois, each accompanied by two laymen.

AIDS FIGHT FOR LATER TRAINS

Councillor Daniel J. McDonald today heartily endorsed the Boston AMERICAN campaign for later night trains to the suburbs and cities and towns in Metropolitan Boston.

It is one step in the right direction and it is surprising to me that it has not been agitated before, he said.

Boston is too provincial. To bottle up the town after 11 o'clock is making a rural community out of a bustling city.

There is no question in my mind but the railroads could increase their service and satisfy those who desire to go directly home after the theatre as well as those who wish to dine after the show.

The poor train service hurts the business of the theatres and it must hurt the business of the hotels in a corresponding ratio. People will not come into Boston to go to the theatres when they realize that they must go directly to the train after the show. Enough time to enjoy a lunch would make it more enjoyable all around.

Observing the patronage of the late trains it strikes me that there is plenty of business to warrant an additional train or many lines.

I would have called this matter officially to the attention of the Boston City Council, but I learned that through the efforts of the AMERICAN and Mayor Fitzgerald, the Boston Chamber of Commerce is now considering the matter. Until such time as the report is in I will not take any action upon it.

The Council has no authority to act in such matters, but we can request the officials of the road to come before us or let us know why additional service is not furnished to meet the demand. If the Chamber of Commerce investigation does not accomplish what is expected, I will seek the information.

Letters have poured into the Mayor's office commending the efforts of the AMERICAN in endeavoring to secure later trains out of Boston. Lewis E. Sullivan, one of the Central Labor Union auditors, writes:

I am glad that one newspaper has taken up the question of securing additional train service for the suburbs. During the recent street car strike I used the trains almost entirely, and it was seldom that going home on the 11:22 p. m. to Norwood and subscription stations one would be able to find a seat in the smoker. There is no doubt that an additional train on this one line alone could be operated at a profit.

After all, one of the primary duties of a railroad is to serve the public, and when public convenience demands later trains and additional service, it strikes me that the railroads should not have to be induced or forced to meet this demand.

LAWSUIT SHOWS BREWERS IN POLITICS

Treasurer of Company Testifies About Money in the Elections.

WORCESTER, Oct. 22.—The Abraham Reimold suit for an accounting of certain funds of the Worcester Brewing Corporation, which has brought out the admission by the brewing corporation's attorney that it spent money for election purposes, was resumed at 10 o'clock today before Judge William T. Forbes of the Probate Court as master.

Herbert A. Maynard, secretary-treasurer, was to resume the stand to answer further questions regarding expenditures marked "for election," "elec.," "election city," and so on.

On the opening day Secretary Maynard, who brought checkbooks and checkbooks, was unable to explain a $500 check, drawn November 19, 1907, signed by the Worcester Brewing Corporation and with the word "election" written on the stub in the checkbook. Maynard was unable to tell who used the check or to whom he gave it.

"Used for Election."

After questions had been asked about several entries marked "elec.," "for election," and so on, E. A. McClintock, attorney for the brewing company, said:

"There is no question but these moneys were used for election. We admit it. Some of it was used to bring voters to the polls. There was some money spent also in getting men out to register, to carry them to the registration place."

Mr. McClintock would not admit, however, that any of the money was used to bring to the polls voters who would vote for any particular candidate.

One of the last statements made before the master was the declaration by Attorney Charles F. Choate of counsel for Reimold, that he was advised money was used to gain the election of officers who had power in the granting of licenses.

Abraham Reimold formerly was brewmaster for the Worcester Brewing Corporation. His suit for an accounting is directed against the corporation and Michael J. Finnigan, president and general manager.

Other Cities, Also.

The action, through its previous procedure in the courts, has been reduced to one requiring an accounting of funds of the corporation, which the brewmaster alleges, in a long bill, have been misappropriated. In this connection it was stated by counsel for the plaintiff, Reimold, who is no longer connected with the brewery, that it is claimed $40,000 was contributed by the corporation during the last few years to lubricate city elections, not only in Worcester, but in Fitchburg, Lynn and other cities where the brewing concern has an interest in the sale of beer and ale.

For the plaintiff there were present Charles F. Choate and Arthur J. Young, representing Choate, Hall & Stewart, Boston, and T. B. Sullivan. On the other side was John H. Meagher of Meagher & Zeeder and Mr. McClintock of Carroll & McClintock, Springfield. George A. Smith, the expert accountant employed by the plaintiff, sat beside Reimold.

Maynard on Stand.

Secretary Maynard, the first witness, was questioned by Mr. Choate.

"Did you bring the cash book I asked for with you?"

"No, sir."

"Well, I sent a summons asking you for the cash book from January 9, 1909, to date. Why didn't you bring all the books?"

"They will be in your hands in time."

"I want them now."

Witness said they were using this particular cash book in the office at present. He said he would bring it to court. He was able to put his hands upon cash book No. 6. He was asked to turn to Page 113. He read an entry under date of December 9, 1905. It was "Elec. M. J. Finnigan, $500."

This was the opening up of the records as to money that had been alleged to have been appropriated for election expenses by the corporation, and upon Attorney McClintock objecting, this feature of the examination was waived, the court reserving its decision after an argument and for the time being confining the examination to a period embraced within six years.

Case book number 7 showed, under the date of November 15, 1906, an entry reading, "Elec. Taunton, Nov. 10, 1906—$500."

"What Does 'Elec.' Mean?"

"What does Elec. stand for?"

"Don't know. Never did know. Don't know now."

"You can form a surmise as to that?"

Objection and question excluded.

"You say you don't know whether that was paid out."

"Yes, sir."

"Have you a voucher for it?"

"I don't know."

"Can you tell whether you signed a check for that amount?"

"I could not."

He could not tell what the abbreviation Elec. meant in this connection nor in the case of an item marked October 13, "Elec. W. G. Guernsey, $50."

Witness said that the woman who keeps the books had been there a good many years and that he had probably given her directions at the beginning of her work. He said he was responsible in a way.

"Did you at any time open an account under the title of election expenses?"

"I don't think so."

Witness did not recall at any time that the corporations kept an account of election expenses.

One Taunton Check.

A check book was not produced, and witness was directed to look at check stub number 11,896. He couldn't tell in whose handwriting the name Taunton was. A good many people had access to the check books.

"I presume I might have written it, but I'm not sure."

"Does the check stub mean that it had something to do with Taunton? Does the item mean that there was a disbursement there?"

"I presume so."

"Disbursement for what?"

"For business in Taunton, perhaps."

The witness read the check stub, which showed that a check had been made out to J. H. Coughlin for $500. Coughlin belonged in Sterling.

"My recollection is that the check stub would have reference to licenses in Taunton. It is necessary at times to loan money to people—obligations for license money."

"Can you suggest any connection between the word 'Elec.' and expenditures for licenses in Taunton?"

"No."

"'Elec.' is not an abbreviation for license, is it?"

"Not that I know of."

Under October 8, 1906, in the cash book there was an entry of $200 paid to T. F. Hedersman. This was also marked "Elec." The witness didn't know what this was for, either. He said his vouchers might help him to tell what this expenditure was for, but there was some difficulty in getting at the vouchers, although there was a pile of them in court. He recognized check stub number 11,432 as being in his own handwriting. It was payable to Hedersman. This stub was marked "Election."

He Doesn't Know.

"What does that word mean there?"

"It means what it says."

"What did you write the word 'election' there for?"

"I don't know."

"You don't mean that you made meaningless entries upon your check book?"

"I don't know."

Witness said Hedersman lives in Webster, conducts a hotel, he knew him and he presumed he had occasion to make checks out to him on more than one occasion.

"Were they always marked with the word 'election'?"

"Not that I know of."

"Who told you to make checks out to him?" Did you do it because Mr. Finnigan told you to?"

"I can't say."

"Who gave you the authority?"

"I don't know now who gave me authority."

"Can you produce any authority for giving him money for election?"

"I don't know as I can."

"What did you do it for?"

"I don't know as I did."

"For Association," Says Witness.

"You don't mean that you took the corporation's money and used it that way?"

"Don't think it was given for election. I think it was a contribution for the Liquor Dealers' Association."

He could not say whether there was a voucher for this and he presumed the contribution was requested.

"To beared for what purpose?"

Witness said he didn't know, and when he was asked if there was any connection between the Liquor Dealers' Association and the word election that would cause him to put down the word "election," he said not particularly.

"Do you intend to tell his honor that the word upon this stub 'election' meant a contribution to the Liquor Dealers' Association?"

"Yes, sir."

Witness said he did not remember precisely.

"If you don't know, how do you make the assertion that it was for election.

"If I didn't say it, I won't admit that I said it."

"Do you deny that the money for which that check was drawn was to be used in connection with an election?"

"I can't say anything further about it. I should deny that it would be used for election—I say intended for election purposes. I deny it."

In the cash book was the word election and $250 under date of February 20, 1907, and there was an erasure of part of the item, apparently. He knew nothing as to when the erasure was made. He said if election errors were made, erasures probably followed.

Attorney Choate sent for a microscope. Witness said he thought the handwriting was that of Miss O'Meara. He said he could not suggest anything in reference to the item other than what was written. There was an item in the cashbook which the witness read under date of February 20, 1907: "M. J. F. car fares, city election." He knew nothing of that. On the book was an entry marked "Elec. M. J. F. $250." He couldn't say whether he put that there or not.

One stub in the check book showed that $500 was to be used by M. J. Finnigan under date of January 7, 1907, in Lynn. Witness couldn't say whether this was for election purposes. Still another item was down for J. H. Coughlin, calling for $75, March 1 of the same year. This was marked "Elec." There were checks drawn in favor of F. F. Noonan for $50; T. F. Collins, Natick, $25; R. R. Johnson, $25; B. B. Leonard, Athol, $25; Champagne & Sullivan, $50. The check book showed that $50 was paid to Thomas Brazzell, Gardner, March 9, 1907. In the cash book was another entry reading, March 12, 1907, "Elec. M. J. F. $400."

"Was Mr. Finnigan running for any office that time?" inquired Mr. Choate of Mr. Maynard.

"No, sir."

"What would he be using this money for?"

"All I know is the item as it is written here."

"It might have known something about it, but I don't now. This is the first time I have seen it since it was written.

"March 12, 1907, Joseph Labelle. Elec. $50.' What was that for?"

"I presume it was for what it says."

"What's that 'For election'?"

Labelle is of East Douglas. The writing was that of Miss O'Meara. Witness did not know about the item. "Elec. Southbridge, $75." Then there was an item, "Elec. Barry & Potts, $25." They are at Ware. Other items were: March 27, 1907, T. F. Hedersman, Elec., $150; March 28, 1907, Elec. Southbridge, M. J. F., $100; Frank Kenney, Oxford, March 28, 1907, $40. There was a check paid to James Meehan of the East Brookfield Hotel March 28, 1907, for $50.

Other checks included one to A. W. Killeen, Danielson, Ct., for $25, and another for $50 to Henry Tatro, saloonkeeper at Putnam, Ct. The Tatro entry on the cashbook was "Elec. Putnam, $50," and was made September 23, 1907. The Killeen entry similarly marked was made out October 2, 1907. November 2 there was an entry similarly marked for J. H. Coughlin for election expenses. Witness said he was a salesman when asked if he was not the Sterling Coughlin. October 9, 1907, T. F. Hedermas got a check for $200. The book was marked "Elec" and the check "Election, Webster." J. Boucher, "Elec., $25, Ware"; November 26, 1907, "Elec., 1907, Lynn, $100"; "J. H. Sullivan, $100."

Under date of November 16, 1907, there was another "Elec." check. This went to Henry F. McManus, Fitchburg, for license expenses, and was for $150.

Under date of November 26, 1907, was an entry, "Election city, $500."

ATTORNEY ADMITS MONEY WAS USED FOR ELECTION PURPOSES

There is no question that these moneys were used for election purposes. We are willing to admit this. Most of it was used to bring voters to the polls. There was some money spent also in getting men out to register, to carry them to the registration places.

—Statement by E. A. McClintock, attorney for the brewery.

POLITICAL NEWS

Vote for Wilson, Foss, Walsh and Other Democratic Candidates

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 22.—Besides being his own tallorandvalet upon occasions, Governor Wilson demonstrated today that he could be his own stenographer and secretary as well, just like ordinary folks.

The Democratic nominee had dictated a number of letters to his stenographer and sent him away to transcribe them. The Governor had made only partial inroads into his correspondence, however, when he sat down in the library at his home and dictated several letters to himself. He has written shorthand since he was a boy.

After scratching away on a pad for a while, the Governor brought forth an old-fashioned little typewriter, "constructed for a right hander," as he describes it. There he worked away, pounding out the letters. Slowly he read them over, addressed a lot of envelopes, folded the letters, licked the stamps and walked to the corner post box and mailed them.

The Governor rose early today, and after tackling the batch of correspondence he went to the State House in Trenton for the regular Tuesday's roundup of State business.

Women Meet to Aid Taft.

Republican women from throughout the State will gather in Cambridge tonight to listen to campaigning plans formulated by Mrs. Larz Anderson, wife of the United States Minister to Belgium, on behalf of Taft.

Mrs Anderson is an advisory member of the Woman's Department of the Republican National committee. She, and Miss Helen Varick Boswell of New York, who is chairman of the committee, will address the meeting.

There was something lacking about the Foss campaign tour through the Fourteenth Congressional District. Foss was well received at Avon and also at Holbrook, but on the way from Holbrook to Brockton, the Governor said to the 'AMERICAN reporter, "I knew there was something wrong. I forgot to wear my old campaign ulster." The Governor substituted an up-to-date linen auto coat. He returned to Boston and got the faded old coat. He appeared in better spirits at the night rallies.

Edward Gilmore, who is running for Congress in the Fourteenth District, proved to be a very popular candidate. And, by the way, here is something new in campaign work. At the Gilmore headquarters in Brockton visitors are supplied with chocolate drops. The chocolate drops are making a big hit. They ought to, because they are mighty good.

Candidate Walsh received his share of applause. Only once did he fail to prove attractive. He talked to an enthusiastic crowd at North Easton Square, and waxed warm and eloquent against the "awful Republicans and Schedule K." Business apparently was suspended in the town, but one man failed to listen. Mr. Walsh spoke from an auto directly in front of the village tailor shop. Mr. Jacobson, the tailor, was busy cutting a woolen fabric and did not even open his door.

It is not often that two veterans will walk more than a mile to hear a political speech. At the Avon rally two of the most interested spectators were Thomas Wall and Henry Haywood. Both are Civil War veterans and very old. Veteran Haywood is a Bull Mooser. Mr. Wall is a Democrat. Both shook hands with the Governor.

Little Catherine Foian of Norwood is a very much pleased girl today. She has actually shaken hands with Governor Foss. Her daddy lifted her into the Governor's auto and the Governor told the little miss that he was glad to see her, "When you grow up you will have a vote," he said.

That unknown quantity, commonly called an automobile, had its innings during the day. The one containing the newspaper men ran out of juice before getting out of Boston. The scribes also got lost and would have been well on their way to Detroit if a kindly farmer hadn't given some advice as to the way to Avon.

All the participants in the tour spoke about the interest shown in the campaign by the women and young men. At every rally women were present. The night rallies in particular had a large quota of them. First voters were out in large numbers. One of them is Charles W. Proctor of Randolph. He has just been admitted to the bar and made his debut in politics yesterday as a Democratic orator. His father and grandfather were prominent Republicans.

WHERE DEMOCRATS ARE TO MEET FOR TONIGHT'S RALLIES

Here are tonight's Democratic rallies and speakers:

Lowell—William C. Redfield of New York, James M. Curley, Thomas H. Dowd, David H. Shaw and local candidates.

Lawrence—William C. Redfield of New York, James M. Curley, David H. Shaw and local candidates.

Ayer—Thomas J. Boynton, George H. Corliss, Thomas H. Dowd and local candidates.

Medford—Governor Eugene N. Foss, David I. Walsh, Fred S. Deitrick, James Carens, Thomas A. Mullen and local candidates.

Arlington—Governor Eugene N. Foss, David I. Walsh, Fred S. Deitrick, James Carens and local candidates.

Melrose—Governor Eugene N. Foss, David I. Walsh, Fred S. Deitrick, George W. Anderson, John J. Attridge and local candidates.

Wakefield—Governor Eugene N. Foss, David I. Walsh, Fred S. Deitrick, George W. Anderson. Thomas A. Mullen and local candidates.

FOSS STIRS UP 8TH DISTRICT

Governor Foss and his running mate, David I. Walsh, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, whirled through the Eighth Congressional District today, arousing enthusiasm everywhere they spoke. At Lexington Governor Foss made a ringing speech and called on Democrats and Republicans alike to vote for Woodrow Wilson.

"I am speaking to you now as one man to another," declared the Governor to a crowd in which there was a generous representation of Republicans. "Cast aside your party preference and vote for Woodrow Wilson. Also give him a Democratic Congress. I believe that the election of Wilson will be the first step towards solving the great problems before the people of the United States."

Must Keep Pledges.

The Governor's Lexington speech was declared the best he has made since he opened the present campaign. The Governor reviewed his administration and declared that more progressive legislation had been passed during the past twelve months than for any twenty years previous by the Republican party.

The Governor said the Workingmen's Compensation Act was one of the greatest and most beneficial ever passed and also emphasized his stand for competitive transportation in Massachusetts and declared he wanted to curb the control of the New Haven in Massachusetts.

The Governor said the election of Wilson is now a certainty.

"I want it distinctly understood," he went on, "that there is no political party big enough to hold me unless that political party keeps its promises. I was a member of the Republican party, and when that party failed to keep its promises I went with the opposition. If the Democratic party fails to keep its promises I will again go to the opposition, because that is the only way to punish those fellows who say one thing and mean another."

On to Arlington.

From Lexington the party motored to the Arlington Heights outbursts. On the way the auto in which David I. Walsh, two local candidates and a reporter were riding broke down.

At the outburn there was an emergency call awaiting the Governor.

"Send back one of the autos to pick us up," was the telephoned message. The Governor did and later Candidate Walsh and the others rejoined the party.

The next stop as at Waverly. From there the Governor went to Watertown. Here he was cheered by a throng in which there were many women. The Governor said he was pleased to see the women.

"You don't vote," said the Governor, "but you control a vote. We are very fair with you ladies. We have a plank in our platform which will put woman's suffrage before the people to be acted on."

Frederick S. Dietrick, candidate for Congress in the Eighth District on the Democratic ticket, accompanied the party on today's tour. He was cheered at every stopping place.

NURSE REFUSES TO WED CILLEY

Clave C. Cilley of Everett, who attempted suicide by cutting his throat after Miss Edith Allen, a Roslindale nurse, had refused to wed him, said today that Miss Allen will love him all the more now. But Cilley will be sadly undecorated ere long. Miss Allen says now that she won't marry him anyway.

According to the romance writers, Cilley's effort to end his life should have brought the girl of his choice weeping to his side with promises to marry him as soon as he was able to stand up before a clergyman.

But girls of 1912 do not see it that way, judging by Cilley's lack of success in getting Miss Allen's acceptance.

Cilley still survives, according to the surgeons at the Emerson Hospital, Forest Hills. The first thing he said today, the police declare, was:

"My girl didn't love me as much as I loved her, but she will love me all the more now."

But Miss Emma M. Crawford, at whose private sanatarium, No. 154 Metropolitan avenue, Roslindale, Miss Allen is engaged, quotes the nurse as saying she will not go to the Emerson Hospital to see him nor will she marry him.

Cilley cut his throat in the kitchen of the Crawford Sanatarium. The circumstances, as related by Miss Crawford, who talked today for Miss Allen, were thus:

"Edith Allen and this Mr. Cilley were only friends. She has been here but a short time. They knew each other in Nova Scotia and met about four years ago. Miss Allen was in the habit of taking short walks with him and she only cared for him as a friend

"She told him so. He proposed marriage to her and she explained that she did not care enough for him to marry him. He came to my house last night. When he rang the door bell, Miss Allen, who was in the kitchen preparing a tray for a patient, went to the door to let him in. Then she returned to her duty in the kitchen. When her work there was finished she returned to see him, and found him lying on the floor with his throat slashed. She screamed and her screams brought me to the room in a hurry.

"They were only friends. Miss Allen told me so. They were out for a walk last Sunday. He made her a proposal of marriage, which she refused to consider.

"Miss Allen told me that she wouldn't marry him now anyway. She will not see him nor even visit him at the hospital."

When Cilley was discovered on the floor at the sanatarium a note was found beside his body, so the police say, which he had written on a piece of paper torn from his notebook. It read: "There is no one else to blame. I did this myself."

HELD FOR ATTACK.

Salvatore Darona, forty-seven, arrested by the Quincy authorities in a barn, was turned over to the Boston police today to be held for the police of Cromwell, Ct. The police charged Darona with murderous assault.

HUNT ASSAILANT OF WEBSTER WOMAN

WEBSTER, Oct. 22.—The police today cast a dragnet in this section of Worcester County in their hunt for the man who brutally attacked Mrs. Alice Farrell, seventy, of this place. Mrs. Farrell was forced to remove her shoes in which her assailant believed she had hidden her money. The woman had drawn the money from the bank and was on her way home. She was attacked, but the would-be-robber overlooked the money, which was hidden in her shirtwaist. She is in a critical condition.

DR. MANN GIVES MISSIONARY TALK BEFORE CONVENTION

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 22.—Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity Church, Boston, delivered the principal address today before the Episcopal missionary convention, which began its two-day session in St. John's Church, this city. Dr. Mann defined the missionary needs of New England. He advocated greater interest in foreign missions, saying the time never was so ripe for Christianity in Japan or China as it is today.

LOST MELROSE MAN DROWNED

of loose hay to sell. He said the hay was to the cars at the Melrose depot.

An investigation was made of the man's story at the depot. There was no care of hay there. Farmers and hay and grain dealers said it would be impossible to get thirty tons of hay in three cars. They said it would take nearly ten cars to care for so large a quantity.

It was this clew that led the police on what they consider a "wild goose" chase looking for a hay salesman, thinking it might have been Littlefield.

Littlefield was last seen by his family about 9:30 o'clock Friday morning. By noon time the alarm had been given. His friends realized that his health had been bad and that he might have wandered away. A searching party was formed in the neighborhood and they worked all Friday and Saturday. On Sunday a crowd of 200 citizens headed by Mayor French split up into several groups. They traveled in autos and afoot, scouring the country for several miles.

WITNESS SAYS HE SAW ETTOR IN STRIKE MOB

SALEM COURTHOUSE, Oct. 22.—Witnesses called in the trial of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso today in the Superior Criminal Court swore that they saw Joseph J. Ettor on the street in Lawrence during the car riots on the morning of January 29, the day on which Annie Lo Pezzi was shot.

The testimony was regarded as the most important in the case to date. Ettor and Giovannitti are accused as accessories before the fact to the slaying of Mrs. Lo Pezzi. The woman was shot and killed late on the afternoon of January 29. Ettor, according to two policemen called as witnesses, was on the street in the morning.

Patrolman Michael Moore, a Syrian member of the Lawrence police force, said:

"I saw Ettor on the morning of January 29. I talked to him. When Patrolman Watkin arrested the fellows who were bothering the girls I heard Ettor shout to the crowd, 'Come here, don't let them take that man.'"

"What did you say?" asked District Attorney Attwill.

"Well, to tell you the truth, I said to Ettor, 'You bloody Dago, why don't you come and take him and do your dirty work yourself?'"

Instead of merely meeting the government's allegations, the seven lawyers for the defence will present unexpected counter charges of a sensational nature.

The defence will attempt to show that the attack on the mills on the morning of January 15 and the more serious car riots on January 29 were not inspired by I. W. W. agents or sympathisers, but were the result of the disorder precipitated deliberately by persons imported for the purpose.

Detective on Stand.

State Detective Fred F. Flynn of Lawrence, who with Captain Proctor, has aided District Attorney Attwill in the preparation of the cases against Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso, continued his testimony at the morning session today.

Detective Flynn's testimony produced the first exhibit offered in the trial, a warlike assortment of weapons—a glistening revolver with a long barrel, a belt with twenty-five cartridges, a clasp knife and a dagger in a sheath.

This small arsenal, State Detective Flynn said, he took from one young man who was arrested on the morning of January 15 when the strikers raided the Wood and other mills.

The weapons were offered in evidence by District Attorney Attwill, who unwrapped the brown paper and Detective Flynn identified the exhibits in turn. He gave a graphic description of arresting the man who attempted to draw the revolver.

"Aided by a patrolman, I seized the fellow," testified Flynn, "and the crowd came at us howling mad. With drawn guns we were forced back with our prisoner against the wall. Reaching a door we kicked it with our heels. As the crowd became more menacing, I threatened to shoot the first man who came near me, and then after more kicking somebody opened the door and we jumped into the mill with our man. We found all these things on him when we searched him."

Attorney Peters then questioned Flynn. He centered his fire on the alleged utterances of his client, Giovannitti, as testified to by Detective Flynn and Inspector Byron. Flynn produced a memorandum book and read:

"Inspector Byron remarked to Giovannitti as we were walking past the Common on Lawrence street: 'There is the old bandstand from which you told the strikers to sleep by day and act like wild animals at night.' Giovannitti replied to Byron: 'Yes, and there will be more speaking yet.' Then he added to Byron: 'I suppose you are helping Mr. Wood.' Byron replied: 'No, it is our duty to protect the law.'

"I wrote these notes in the book next morning," said Flynn.

Protected Children.

Then the third lawyer for the defence, Attorney John P. S. Mahoney of counsel for Ettor, asked Flynn:

"You testified that you boarded one of the trolley cars on the morning of January 29 and that there were children on the car?"

"I did."

"What for?"

"To protect the children."

"Did you say that you saw Ettor in that parade?"

"I say I saw Ettor in a mob."

"It was a crowd marching, was it not?"

"It was a marching mob."

Patrolman Patrick J. Barry of Lawrence described the riots of January 15 and January 29.

"I had a cup of coffee and a sandwich in my hand when I heard the first shot. They were shouting. An Italian named Russo drew a gun and broke it to drop out the empty shells. I dropped my coffee and went after him. I got him and his gun on Mill street. The gun was warm.

"I saw a mob. A man was knocked down and somebody started to loot him. A wagon near arrested and I got the kicker. The crowd was yelling, 'No work today! Nobody shall work today!'"

Charles M. Watjin, a Lawrence policeman, described the car riots on January 29.

Saw Ettor Leading Mob.

"Did you see Ettor then" asked District Attorney Attwill.

"I did, at 5:45, near the strike headquarters, No. 321 Common street. He was walking toward Amesbury street with a crowd of 150, who were hollering and waving flags. We drove them back to the sidewalk. Ettor went into a doorway. Ten minutes later some fellows held up two girls, who screamed. I got one of them. The crowd threatened me. Officer Moore drew his revolver. I didn't see Ettor after he went into the doorway. They had small red flags."

"Are you smiling about this?"

"No."

"Haven't you had a smile on your lips?"

"I may have smiled, but I don't consider this a smiling matter."

"Do you consider it a laughing matter?"

"No, I think it pretty serious."

"What did Ettor say when you called him a 'dago'?"

"Nothing."

"What did those with him do or say?"

"Nothing to me."

"What nationalities were in that crowd?"

"Syrians and Poles."

"Any Italians?"

"There may have been."

"Why didn't you take Ettor?"

"Because I was more interested in seeing that my fellow officer was not hurt."

"Didn't you think he was a transgressor of the law, the chief offender?"

"Yes, I guess he was, but I didn't want him."

Rakes Up Moore's Record.

"Aren't you the Saliva Moore who on July 30, 1911, was fined $10 in the Lawrence Police Court for the larceny of four bale of Twine from the Pacific Mills?"

"I am."

"Then you have been known as Saliva Moore after all?"

"I admitted before that I had been called by that name."

"Are you the Saliva Moore who on September 24, 1904, made an assault with a knife on Asid Alonkee and was sentenced to the Concord Reformatory?"

"I am."

An attempt on the part of the district attorney to offer redirect testimony on these records was overruled by Judge Quinn.

Patrolman Edward A. Johnson, a member of the Lawrence police force thirty-two years, testified that the strikers on the morning of January 29 held up and jostled employes of stores and other establishments.

"I saw Ettor between 5:45 and 6:15 a. m., in a crowd that was holding up people to stop work," added Johnson.

"I saw Ettor and Giovannitti at the head of a mob, marching down Common street. The paraders called by-standers to join them. At the corner of Newbury street, Ettor said something in Italian to Giovannitti who continued with the procession down toward Unio natreet while Ettor ran down Newbury street to Essex street.

"On the morning of January 18 I saw a crowd near the Everett mills, and Ettor got on a wagon and adressed them.

"On the evening of January 29 (the day of the riot that Mrs. Lo Pizzi was killed in) I was at the corner of Union and Gardner streets with other officers. The streets were crowded.

"Sergeant Spranger ordered the streets cleared. We started to drive them into Gardner street. As fast as we drove the helped us. Shots rang out at the corner crowd in one direction we were hemmed of Union and Gardner streets."

In by a crowd coming the other way. We were pelted with ice and coal. I was struck several times. The crowds pressed in on both sides again. Then the militia

Aunt Sally's Advice to Beauty Seekers

Red Nose. The nose is a more delicate organ than most people imagine. It should be touched as little as possible. For undue redness the treatment recommended in following paragraph will be found effective. Apply without rubbing.

Muddy Skin. The safest, safest and surest method of giving a clear, healthy, transparent appearance to the complexion is to apply ordinary mercolized wax every night for from one to two weeks. This wax, obtainable at any drug store (one ounce is sufficient), actually takes off a bad complexion by gently and gradually absorbing the thin veil of surface skin. The new skin then in evidence is as fresh and velvety as a young girl's. The wax is applied like cold cream and washed off mornings.

Wrinkles. A harmless lotion made as follows has been found very effective in cases of freckles and fashions: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. Bathe the face in this occasionally.—Woman's Realm.

Miss Hoffmann Tells Jewelry Theft Story; Two Men Indicted

Gertrude Hoffmann, the dancer, who was robbed of her jewels at the Touraine last week, was before the Grand Jury in Suffolk County courthouse today. She was accompanied by her husband, Max Hoffmann, and her maid, Mrs. Deborah Day. The story of the robbery was told to the Grand Jury. Moses Silverstein and Alexander Freed, who were arrested in a house in the South End, charged with the robbery, were indicted. They were charged with breaking and entering and stealing $1,000 worth of jewelry from Miss Hoffmann apartments at the Hotel Touraine. The two defendants were brought before Judge Brown of the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court, where they were held in $3,500 each for trial Thursday. The case was rushed through so that the testimony of Mrs. Hoffmann, her husband and maid could be presented to the jury. The company in which Mrs. Hoffmann is appearing closes its local engagement next week.

MAYOR REPLIES TO CHARGES BY MATTHEW HALE

Flatly denying that he was supported for election by the Boston Elevated and other city financial interest, Mayor Fitzgerald answers Councilor Matthew Hale's charge that he is insincere on progressive issues.

Hale, who is the Bull Moose leader in Massachusetts, is disturbed because some of his friends are intimating that he and other Progressives are aiding Mayor Fitzgerald to go to the United States Senate.

"If Mr. Hale will secure the signatures of the Republican members of the Legislature to a petition to Governor Foss, to which they state that they will support the popular senatorial primary bill, I can safely say that the entire Democratic membership will vote just as it did in the last Legislature for such a proposition."

97 Mass. Ave., Cor. Newbury St.

We promised a more attractive stage setting for the new line of Buick cars than that of our most successful show last fall—and we have certainly kept our word, as all who visited us yesterday and last evening will agree.

All of the 1913 "Piano Finished" Buick roadsters and touring cars are on display.

In the runabout class the $950 Model "24" divides honors with the $1125 Model "30" and all of the touring cars are so popular that it is hard to decide which will be the leader. Size alone seems to be the choice between the "25" at $1050—"31" at $1285 and "40" at $1650.

We urge all who are interested in motor cars to avail themselves of this opportunity of inspecting the 1913 Buicks under conditions which we have endeavored to make most pleasant.

M'GRAW FAVORS TWO NEW RULES

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The World's Series rules will most likely be amended before next year as a result of suggestions made by Manager McGraw of the Giants to Garry Hermann, chairman of the national commission, and Ban Johnson, president of the American League.

In the seventh game in Boston, when the Giants lit upon Joe Wood's delivery in the first inning and scored six runs, the entire New York team was on the anxious seat for fear that their great lead would count for naught, as the clouds were gathering thick and fast at the time and it looked doubtful if the teams could play more than three or four innings. In this case, unless they played the full five innings, the Giants would have done all of their cannonading for nothing.

McGraw suggested that a rule be made for future world's series games that if rain stopped a game, no matter at what stage, play be resumed the following day where the two teams left off.

The other rule that McGraw suggested was to let all the fans who attend a game see the play-off free of charge, their seat checks being sufficient credential to get them into the park.

WORLD SERIES HEROES

CHARLEY HERZOG—No. 3

Down at Ridgely, Md., Charley Herzog is trying to blot from his memory certain painful incidents of the world series that cost the Giants the championship.

Not that the brilliant third baseman need look with anything but pride upon the role he played, for his work in the series stood out as by far the best of any individual, with the possible exception of certain pitchers. Probably for this reason none was more chagrined over the defeat.

No indelicacy of either team played such a splendid or consistent game, and at bat even the renowned Speaker was left far behind.

There was just one player who took part in all eight games of the series who had a batting average of .400, and this belonged to the Giant star.

He made an even dozen hits, among them four doubles and a triple, which netted him a total of eighteen bases. His fielding was perfect.

Outclassed Gardner.

By contrast Larry Gardner, rated as the foremost third sacker in the American League, was forced to second place.

In the voluminous comparisons of the players made before the series few of the experts rated the Giant star as the equal of Gardner. Today there are few who do not admit that he is the equal of the Red Sox infielder.

Herzog's worth as a ball player is not to be judged solely upon the world's series performance. This is merely to bring him more prominently before the public.

He has proved his value long since, and that Manager McGraw recognized his ability may be taken for granted when it is recalled that he signed him up for a term of three years at the time he was repurchased from Boston.

Thus was about the mid-season last year, and Herzog did much toward pulling the Giants a championship when he replaced the veteran Arthur Devlin.

He clouted like a demon from the very start. Devlin in his palmiest days did not play a stronger, faster defensive game than the Maryland farmer.

Began at Eighteen Years.

This was the fifth season that Herzog put in as a major leaguer. He began playing professional ball when but eighteen years old.

Born in Baltimore, Md., twenty-seven years ago, on July 9, 1885, he spent the greater part of his life around that city. Contrary to general belief, Herzog is not a Hebrew, but of German extraction.

After attending the University of Maryland, where he took a permanent part in baseball, Herzog organized a ball team which he managed successfully. One of the players on his team was J. Franklin Baker, the Athletic's star, who was also a resident of Ridgely, Md., at that time.

From Ridgely Herzog went to York in the Tri-State League and established a fine record as an infielder and hitter.

McGraw heard of him and purchased the youngster in 1908. When Doyle was injured that season Herzog played second base and took part in the famous play-off game against the Cubs.

In 1910 he was traded to Boston for Beals Becker. Then Herzog began to improve in leaps and bounds to such an extent that the Giants' leader regretted having let him go.

Early in 1911 trouble developed among the Boston players, during which Herzog quit the team after being fined $200 for alleged indifferent playing.

This induced the Boston club to look favorably upon a chance to trade him. McGraw finally secured him at the expense of Al Bridwell and Hank Gowdy.

GRIDIRON NEWS OF BIG COLLEGES

Williams Team Strengthened.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Oct. 22.—Captain Michael and Toolin, who were both on the injured list when the Williams team met Dartmouth last Saturday, are again in good condition, and ran through signals with the varsity. Their loss was keenly felt in the last game, and their presence against New York University this week should make sure the Purple's chances of victory. Young, a member of the scrubs, who gave an excellent exhibition at guard in the game with the Green, remained on the varsity, replacing Mason. Vinal was not feeling very energetic, and he was not required to report for work.

Dartmouth Ready for Tigers

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 22.—More than 500 Dartmouth students, the largest number that has ever made the trip, will accompany the team to Princeton next Saturday to root for the Green.

The training table has been started with sixteen men. They are: Captain Bennett, Whitmore, Engleborn, Estep, Rector, Barends, Gibson, Louden, Llewellyn Gbee, Whitney, Hogsett W. Rogers, Morey, D. Rogers and Snow. It is probable that more men will be taken on as the season advances.

The team began this week's practice suffering no ill effects from the Williams game, and with the exception of "Bill" Roger's slightly sprained ankle, the team is in fine condition. A hard practice was given to the men, and the coaches declare that the players have awakened to the fact that they are weak on the defense, and a great improvement was evident throughout the afternoon's work. Against Princeton the Green will present her strongest team possible with the exception of Captain Ray Bennett. It is doubtful if he will be in condition to get into the game.

Wilson Sees Tigers Work

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 22.—About the middle of the football practice the men had a visit from Woodrow Wilson, his second appearance at the gridiron this year, and this time he really seemed to be one of the coaches. The presidential candidate strolled over the gridiron among the players and seemed to manifest a great interest in them. He had a long conversation with "Snake" Ames, a Tiger star in the Governor's day.

The varsity was on the defence through the early part of the scrimmage. A long drill for the forwards in breaking through, and a twenty-minute scrimmage that consisted entirely in exchanges of punts, completed the work.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

One of the pleasing features of the world's series was the meritorious work of the four umpires—Messrs. O'Loughlin and Evans of the American League and Messrs. Klem and Rigler of the National League. It was so very good that the players, the writers and the public joined in heading bouquets to the officials. Even John McGraw, who has always had his troubles with umpires, declared their work was almost perfect. The National Commission, always liberal, promptly added $200 to the $700 it had decided to give each indicator man, and as a result they hauled down $1,000 and expenses for their eight days' work. No one begrudges them the money. It is something unheard of for a set of umpires to get through a series without a protest. It is a good thing for the game to have a world's series handled as these four men handled it. The National League umpires must have been "rooting" for the Giants, while undoubtedly the American League pair wanted to see the Red Sox win. But, whatever their sympathies were, they showed no partiality on the field.

It is probably true that a first class umpire gets in the habit of calling the plays just as he sees them and that probably nine out of ninety-nine times in a hundred he does not know what club the player involved belongs to. In other words the instant he is making his decision he sees only the play and his mind does not connect the name of the club with the player or the player with the club. So when an umpire is accused of favoring this club or that club he is, most likely, not at all, simply calling the plays instantly without any favor. If one club seems to have the better of the decisions that club is only getting the "breaks" of the game. Umpires have their off days; so do players. Ball players make errors. Why should not umpires make errors?

The profession of umpiring is growing better every year. The days when a big league umpire was forced to smash through the sidestreets are past. He no longer lives in obscure hotels while pursuing his calling. He shows himself like any other self-respecting human being. Umpiring has been reduced to a minimum. Baseball managers like John McGraw, who three or four years ago spent half their time under suspicion, to the detriment of their club, no longer harass the umpire as they used to do. McGraw makes his protests, but he is more careful of his language. Even Griffith, manager of the Washington club, has at last learned his lesson, and his enforced absences from the coaching lines are few and far between.

In the old days the mere calling of a ball or a strike would cause an entire National League team to figuratively drop dead on the field. It was no uncommon thing to see nine men fall to the ground, roll over, kick their heels, throw up gloves and then arising, advance on the umpire for ten or fifteen minutes of Bowery argument. The umpires had to stand for long wrangles, kicks, protests and billingsgate because the club owners encouraged their players to intimidate the umpires. Things grew worse and worse until finally the American League was organized with Ban Johnson at its head. Johnson immediately ordered that all umpire baiting be cut out. It took Johnson long and weary months to demonstrate that he meant business, but he won the battle. Nowadays nearly every player in the American League realizes it is a very foolish thing to use an umpire. The National League slowly but surely fell into line and the disgraceful scenes of a decade ago are seldom enacted nowadays.

Umpire Rigler of the National League is planning to take a team of players to Cuba and will do so if he can secure the permission of the baseball authorities. Fifteen years ago an umpire would be taking his life in his hands to attempt such a proposition.

Times are changing. The baseball umpire is being treated with distinguished consideration. Shades of Anson!

Horace Fogel now seems resigned to his fate. Evidently he has been informed that there is no chance of his continuing in National League baseball and he now declares that he is not only willing, but anxious to sell his holdings in the club. But he intimates that he wants a big price. He is said to be holding out for $1,000,000. This is a tremendous price for the property—or rather for the players. Franchise and lease on the grounds, for the club doesn't own the park, but leases it from Charles P. Tutt, brother of the President. It is good betting, however, that Fogel will not get anywhere near his price, and will have to be satisfied with the best offer he can get. There are known to be two and possibly three syndicates who would like to buy Fogel's holdings, but the figure he names will scare some of them off. Competition enabled the Russell estate to secure a big price for the Boston National League Club last December. Competition will probably run up the price of Fogel's club, too. Big league baseball franchises are mighty scarce, but the chances are, the would-be buyers will hesitate a long time before they come to Fogel's terms.

BROWN MEN IN SHAPE TO WIN

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 21.—The Brown team put in an afternoon at signal practice, besides trying out a few plays which will be used against Harvard Saturday. No injuries were apparent from the game with Pennsylvania, and practically the same team that defeated Penn will line up against Harvard Saturday. Especial emphasis was laid on the forward pass, and Henry, who has not been showing up particularly well in this department of the game, was given special instructions by the coaches.

Bartlett, last year's right tackle, who was declared eligible last Friday, and used to such advantage at right half-back in Saturday's game, is showing up well in his new position. He is the strongest man in college and speedy, and together with Henry and Tenney will make one of the heaviest thru plunging back fields Brown has ever produced.

With the exception of Goldberg, all the Varsity members were in suits today. Goldberg will be in the game in a day or two. Coach Robinson is allowing the men to rest, and intends to have a final practice again today, with possibly a light scrimmage at the end.

NO FENWAY PARK FOOTBALL THIS YEAR

Fenway Park, the playing field of the Red Sox, will not be used for football this Fall. Several of the schools had hoped to engage it for their annual games. The annual contest between the Boston Latin and English High scheduled for Thanksgiving Day may be played on the old South End Baseball Grounds. Boston Latin School is now using the field for its daily practice.

DRESS SUITS
MELVIN WILLIAMS

When a man gets into a dress suit, he is either well dressed or a boob. And it all depends upon the way the suit fits him.

If you wish to look like a member of the Bingville Athletic Association, at the first Grand Ball, wearing a hired suit, sent him by express from Portland, Maine, then get a dress suit built by an amateur. But if you wish to look so classy that your own wife will fall in love with you, then go over to Gale & Kent's and have them mould a dress suit to your figure.

You can't button up a dress suit. It has to fit with the tailoring there is in it. No pulling in of the collar or shifting the buttons to make a flash. It either is or it ain't. Mostly, it ain't.

I fell for a dress suit, after an entire winter of staying home from social functions where anything except evening clothes would be out of place.

Don't disappoint your wife or your women friends by refusing to look as well as the next man when you attend an evening party. Show your class.

Gale & Kent make the very handsomest dress suits in Boston. Undressed worsteds or finest imported drapesilk linings and a swing and dash to the clothes that make a man feel that he is in right, from the ground up.

Prices run $25 to $40 for a dress suit or Tuxedo. Their regular business suit prices are $15 to $25.

BOSTON CUE MEN IN BIG TOURNEY

Local billiardists are looking forth with interest to the opening of the National Billiard League, when three stars of Pittsburgh next Monday evening with Boston in the entry list.

Charley Warren, one of the best local three-cushion men, will the first of the Boston Representatives to go West. Warren will play three days at Pittsburgh and then go to Chicago, Kansas City and St. Louis to fill three-day engagements.

Although Boston did not make any brilliant splash last season, it having finished at the bottom of the list, President L. A. Curtis is confident that the Hub men will do much better this year.

BOXING BOUT RESULTS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—Sheriff Harbarger stopped the bout between "Gunboat" Smith and Jim Stewart at the end of the seventh round in Madison Square Garden. Stewart was severely punished. Eddie Sherlin of Boston outclassed Joe Rieger of Denver and the referee stopped the bout in the third round. Joe Thomas of New Orleans outpointed Willie Beecher of New York in a fast ten rounders.

NEW BEDFORD, Oct. 22—Sailor White knocked out George Wagner of New York in the first round. Young Beaumont knocked out Mickey Ward in the sixth round and Young LeBeout stopped Young Cassidy in one round.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 22—Johnny Dundee outpointed Matt Brock in ten rounds.

ATHLETIC NOTES

At the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union, to be held in New York on the third Monday in November, the practice of prominent athletes running around the country neglecting meets in their own district is due to receive a severe jolt.

Those who have the interest of athletics at heart are puzzling their heads for some way to stop the rumors that float around, that prominent amateurs look coldly on the medals presented for prizes and go to the box office for a share in the receipts.

It is at this time every year that certain officials begin their annual housecleaning in the Amateur Athletic Union, and after the storm of charges has blown over, nothing more is heard for another year. This does not help the A. A. U. in the least.

The Chicago Athletic Association has not a number of its star swimmer Abe Bermont, who holds the breast stroke record, has handed in his resignation and it is expected that in the future he will represent the Illinois Athletic Club. George Goldrick, the national fancy diver, who is in England at the present time, is not expected to return for a year. Kenneth Huntzagh one of the competitors in the Olympic sprints, has become a student at the Northwestern University.

It seems hard when a man has to go over a hundred miles to obtain his opponent, but that is what Sheppard had to do in order to get Ted Meredith to face Jim Murphy, and whatever powers he used to get the consent of the Penn trainer to let Meredith go up for the match, which Sheppard won.

* * *

From all reports Hannes Kolehmainen will not race Kiviat till November, which he is down to run off the special match in the indoor meet of the St. Agnes Athletic Club. It will be interesting to note how the wonderful Finn will run on the heavy floorings, who was the best man in this country for years was a better indoor runner than on the cinders. If the Finn should show the same improvement one would hesitate to predict what the Olympic champion will do.

The New York Athletic Club will open its regular track shooting season on November 2, at Travers Island. The Boston Athletic Association has already opened at Riverside, and several prizes have been offered for the highest scores made during the season.

"Spectator" is Player in Football Trick

Vanderbilt went up against a funny play Saturday. Following Vanderbilt's kickoff, its opponents lined up hurriedly in kick formation, and then shot a forward pass off toward the sidelines to a man dressed in citizen's clothes, who stepped out onto the gridiron as the ball came out to him. He ran down the field forty yards before nailed by the Vanderbilt quarterback.

To the astonishment of all, he then took off his hat coat and trousers and was found wearing a regular football suit beneath. Vanderbilt had not noticed that only ten opponents were on the field when the ball was kicked off.

RED SOX QUARTETTE WARBLES TO ROOTERS

All of the Red Sox rooters and hundreds of others saw Buck O'Brien and the other members of the Red Sox quartette score one of the biggest hits that the National theatre has yet seen, yesterday. Buck is easily the big feature of the act. He sings a song in a rich baritone voice and last night the audience refused to let the quartette leave until the spotlight flinger had rendered one of the old time favorites not on the programme. The quartette appear in the regular Red Sox uniform and from the moment they enter, the act is a go. Hendricksen, the $1,000 pitcher is not with the troupe, but Forrest Lady joins the baseball warblers tomorrow, giving them a true World's championship furor. Bradley, McInnis, Lyons and O'Brien form the quartette.

REVOLVER CLUB TO START.

The Fall shooting season of the Boston Revolver Club will open tomorrow night at the Federal Range, 117 Federal street. The prospects for a winning team in the Indoor League were never better. There will be a shoot at Walnut Hill on Saturday with the rifle for the National Association medal.

DUFFY TO SHOW IN GOTHAM BOUT

By JACK CONWAY.

FREDDY DUFFY, the Jamaica Plain lightweight, will start his Fall campaign in a New York ring Thursday night. Freddy will meet Jack Britton in the distinguished youth from the big city who showed Eddie Murphy a few new things about the boxing game at the Arena recently.

The Jamaica Plain boy is confident of victory. He has never lost a referee's decision and he says that he will give Britton a hard battle from the time that the bell sounds at the opening of the first stanza until the contest comes to a close.

Britton is the classiest "lightweight" that Duffy has ever been signed to meet. He fought Owen Moran at Fall River last Spring and made a good showing but there is no denying the fact that Moran has not been at his best since he was knocked out by Ad Wogast.

ABE ATTELL, former featherweight champion of the world who meets Jimmy Walsh in a twelve-round encounter at the Pilgrim A. A. Thursday night, will settle in this city tomorrow and will finish his training at the Arena. Attell has agreed to make 124 pounds at 6 o'clock.

The former champion realizes that he will have to be at his best in order to hold his own with Walsh. If Abe is defeated, he will have to seek membership in the "Has Been" club, but if he wins he will be able to demand a return match with Champion Johnny Kilbane. Walsh has been made a slight favorite.

Whether successful or not, they are assured of three squares a day, for along with the party will go several barrels of provisions.

School Sports

The cross country run between Tufts and the University of Maine was won by Bell formerly of Arlington High. Bell, who is only fourteen years of age is a freshman at Maine. He is known quite well in this city from the close manner he has run with Hedlund and Powers of the Boston A. A., and it is many times that he is seen on tracks are predicting fine things for him.

One of the biggest surprises of the season was sprung by the Waltham team when it defeated Somerville. The score should have been more in Waltham's favor if Somerville had not blocked two kicks.

Haverhill continues to add to its string of victories. The score of the game between Everett and Haverhill was the eagerly awaited game on today in the football followers of Greater Boston. Both the present unbeaten Everett rubber-neckers favorite.

Cross country running among the high schools of Boston and suburbs is taking and towns has received a boom this Fall that will help foster the sport.

George Jones, a former High Cross star is having great success with St. Johns Prep. School. They sprung a surprise Saturday by defeating the Rogers Street football team on their own grounds. The work of Tom, the two Mclaughlin brothers and Lynch is very good this season.

A Bachelor's Diary

HIS BRIEF BIT OF HAPPINESS IS MARRED

By MAX

SEPTEMBER 9.—There never was a woman with a memory so poor who did not remember till the end of her days the exact words in which her husband proposed to her.

Surprise, anxiety, disappointment, ecstasy, nausea, and the imparting information of the years fail to weaken her memory in this particular. He never proposed to her, and he said: "Now remember every word I say, and remember every action."

When Miss Hill came into the office with Manette—laughing as she usually did, a hearty version of what I, well, used to a man to have a woman like that for a wife—I remember that with both there was an interval between their first glances which would be hard for me to express what such a moment meant to me. But I can't do it in words.

It's not important that I should. It is the result and not the effort that I remember. All I do remember was that I liked Miss Hill in a way I never had she was shyly confessing that she liked me in that she had learned to love me during our long nights at Plainfield's bedside.

There are a few hours of such exalted happiness in every man's life that they stand out conspicuously in memory. But there are only a few. Looking back over my years when I am now almost 50, I can recall only two or three occasions when I was as happy as I was that morning when Margaret confessed her love for me.

Whatever happens, whatever be the outcome of this terrible tangle I am in I will always have the memory of that hour.

But, oh, Diary, must I go through life with only memory as a companion while others have the reality.

Will I never have the happiness that comes to other men? Am I always to be paying the penalty for bad judgment, for foolishness?

In a Hurry

I wanted Margaret to marry me last night, but she seemed so frightened at the eagerness with which I urged it. I think I hastened to tell her she should have her way. She wanted a trousseau and requires at least three months in which to get ready. Three months! What can I do? Both Leonard, who is determined to marry me offhand, do to me to wait to get rid of him.

I did not go to the office this morning. I had decided to get out on a west side local train and take another car and walk over to Manette's—and Margaret out of the buggy. She started through the gate.

Wait for me, I whispered. I was there first home coming to her. I had to tell her that I could not live without her.

So passed and I stepped into the car. Somehow—I do not remember about it—I managed to say I would be unbearable.

"That I cannot woman," he said, leading the horse away.

Then with Manette hanging sleepily over my shoulder, I turned to Margaret, and tried to make up for the look her hand and turned toward the house.

And that was our first home coming as "he" and "she."

The Result.

It was in a horse car street of a large town and a waiter had done the damage in turning a wagon round. The sharpeyed lawyer, however, to doubly displayed this notice:

"The rent of backing horses."

All Habit.

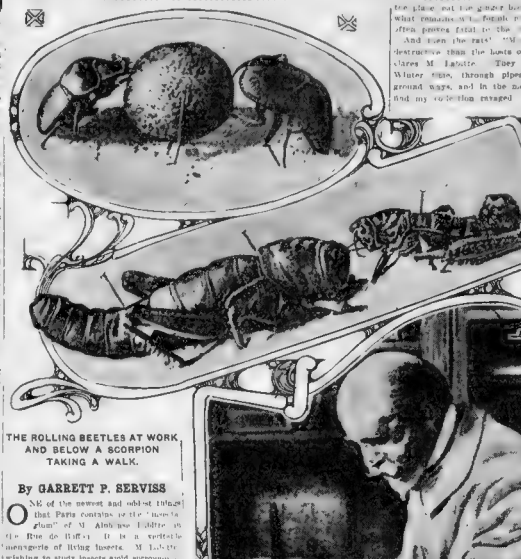
A Menagerie of Insects

The Strange Museum and Laboratory That a French Naturalist Has Established.



THE ROLLING BEETLES AT WORK AND BELOW A SCORPION TAKING A WALK.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

ONE of the newest and oddest things of that Paris contains in the "down-town" of M. Alphonse Labitte at the Rue de Buffon. It is a veritable menagerie of living insects. M. Labitte, wishing to study insects amid surroundings natural to them, and yet covered with a roof and capable of being kept relatively warm and comfortable, has introduced in his entomological laboratory an extraordinary collection of beetles, bugs, flies, scorpions and other strange creatures which he calls his pensionnaires. Many of them have been brought from distant lands, and appear to thrive in their new quarters and multiply as if they were in their native haunts. As far as possible, M. Labitte has given them the kind of dwellings and the sort of food to which they are naturally accustomed. There one may see the scarabæus, the sacred beetle of Egypt taking his prosperous ease in an apparently as if he were on the banks of the Nile, or the "spirit-ing" beetle of Mexico rolling its food in a ball of earth larger than the insect itself, and transplanting it to a new, or to a more favorable, feeding ground, for the purpose, or a variety of gorgeous-colored insects consoling a suit like butterflies, glittering armor.

Exciting Battles

M. Labitte says that the most exciting battles occasionally take place among his little "boarders," and that some of them are fiercer than tigers. They change their dress, make their palace, construct their habitations, care for their progeny, and, in short, behave in all respects as if they were amid their natural surroundings and in their own country.

Such an exhibition is manifestly far more interesting and instructive than any collection of dead insects pinned on cards.

But M. Labitte has his troubles. For lack of money he has been compelled to replace his menage le in underground chambers, which can not be guarded as carefully as he would wish. He has a fight against invaders who destroy his insects, ravage their habitations and devour their food. A curious curio, one of the most interesting and most gent of all lives in the ants instance, forming a fascinating exhibit in the collection, have to be watched and fought against. M. Labitte finds that many of his insects thrive on pain dresden, a kind of spiced gingerbread, but the ants make their way into the place and the ginger bread and poison what remains with a fungus and so that it often proves fatal to the boarders.

And now the pair! "More mercilessly destructive than the hosts of Attila," declares M. Labitte. They come in the Winter time, through pipes and underground ways, and in the morning I may find my collection ravaged and my dear little betes (English "beasts") destroyed or driven away and their habitations laid waste. The rats actually devour some of the beetles, and I find their broken wings covers scattered about. They robbed me in that way of a superb Algerian beetle which, with infinite pains and trouble, I had succeeded in acclimatizing."

But there are better days in store for this curious menagerie. A rich man of Paris has become interested in M. Labitte's experiment, and has promised to aid him financially, so that before long it is probable that the enterprise will make it one of the attractions of Paris for those who find other things to do in the beetles, and I find their broken wings, which are sometimes less important than those of insects.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

"Hum!" rejoined the village post-master. "That's the first time I ever heard either of you telling the truth."

Protecting a Wife

By DOROTHY DIX

EVERY man who loves his wife, and who has a proper sense of a man's responsibility toward a woman he has married, and who has given the best years of her life to him, tries to safeguard her future as well as he can.

He looks forward to a time when he may not be with her and provide for her, and so he settles upon her the house if he can, or puts some good bonds and stocks in her name or he makes heroic efforts and sacrifices to carry some insurance so that she may not be penniless when he is dead.

If the average husband stood tell the dark thought that haunts him the most with its terror it would be the fear of his wife being old and poor, in want, perhaps of even the common necessities of life and it is this spectre of dread that incites him to redoubled effort in his business, and that prompts him to deny himself a thousand little pleasures and luxuries that he would enjoy.

This being true, it is amazing that men bring all their efforts to protect their wives to naught by never teaching the women how to take care of the money they have made so many sacrifices to leave them. Yet the knowledge of how to take care of money is just as necessary as the possession of money. Without the one you cannot have the other long.

An Easy Mark

Every man knows that the champion easy mark of the world is a widow with her insurance money, and that it is such a simple process to swindle her that nobody who can resist the temptation to do it. There is not one of us who cannot name off hand, without even stopping to think, a dozen pitiful, helpless, poverty stricken widows that we know and are called on to help from time to time, who were left comfortable fortunes by their husbands but who have been cheated out of their money or let it slip through their fingers, because they were as ignorant of business as a child.

They didn't know which was the best investment of a clock. They didn't know the difference between a gilt-edge bond and Wild Cat Preferred. They didn't think that such a casual thing as signing your name on a piece of paper that you didn't read could really commit to anything, one way or the other. They were sure that Deacon Smith was perfectly honest because he prayed such beautiful prayers, and that Cousin Thomas would pay them back their money because would be their dead if he did n't.

I know one woman who today is keeping a modest genteel entertainment on what her husband left her $200,000 that she got rid of within two years by the simple expedient of signing an innocent looking paper that a man told her was an option on a lot. She didn't read it. She probably wouldn't have understood it if she had, but when the man was arrested for running a fraudulent real estate agency she found out she was his partner and responsible for a debt. She truthfully declared that she knew of having such connection with him, or was responsible for his deeds, but the law took a very different view of the matter, and she found herself swept bare of every penny.

Each one of you can match this story with another in your own knowledge, and this is what makes it so incomprehensible that the man who is trying to protect his wife doesn't also try to protect her from her own ignorance about money.

How Can She?

Of course men shrug their shoulders and say that women don't understand business. As a general thing that is true, but how should a woman understand anything of it who is never taught? Neither do men understand how to crochet Battenberg stitch embroidery, but that is no indication that they haven't the intelligence enough to learn how to do it. So betting and embroidery if they had the proper instruction in them, and had the importance of learning how to do fancy work impressed on their minds.

That there is nothing so mysterious or occult about ordinary financial affairs that a woman can't learn them is abundantly proven by the fact that there are hundreds of thousands of clever and successful business women in the country, and that many of the most valued employes in every commercial concern are women. Moreover, in the management of their own affairs women are quite as successful as men. The average woman can get twice as much out of a dollar as a man can when it comes to shopping and housekeeping.

There is no earthly excuse that a man can give for not trying to fit his wife to handle whatever money he leaves her when he dies, if practicality no man does it. If you, Mr. Man, who read these lines should die tomorrow, what would your wife know about your affairs? How competent would she be to wind up your business or to carry it on?

How much would she know about the best way to invest her insurance money?

Wouldn't she have to absolutely depend upon your partners, and some lawyer, and trust to their honesty and disinterestedness? Wouldn't she be just as liable to go into a rotten speculation as to make a good investment with her money? Does she even know the difference between living on one's income and spending one's capital? Wouldn't she think that she was as rich as Mr. Rockefeller and could afford a trip to Europe or an automobile if your estate amounted, when settled up, to $20,000, instead of realizing that she must be very economical because she had only an income of $1200 or $1500 a year, and there was no one to bring in any more money?

If you died the happiness of the woman you love and that you know to be so helpless the very food and shelter of your little children, would depend on your wife's knowing how to manage money and take care of what you left her, yet you do not take the trouble to try to prepare her for such a contingency.

It's little short of a crime to turn the defenseless creature out to the tender mercies of the financial sharks. Don't do it. Begin today to try to teach your wife a smattering about your affairs, and about investments. Try to take out some insurance against her ignorance along with your other insurance.

In future all Australia's soldiers will wear the same uniform, irrespective of the branch of the service they represent. The only distinction between the different corps will be found in the color of the hat band. For instance, the Light Horse will have a white hat band; artillery, scarlet; infantry, green, engineers, dark blue; signalers, royal purple; intelligence, light b'lue; army service, blue and white; medical, chocolate; veterinary, maroon, and the automobile, brown.

An umbrella made thief-proof by being locked in such a manner that it cannot be opened has been invented by a London cloakroom attendant. The locking device consists of a metal collar, one end of which may be slipped down over the rib-tips, and is securely locked to them by revolving the three metal rings. These rings bear the letters and numerals of the secret combination.

In Lisbon the straw coat has become very fashionable. It is a rather cumbrous garment, but the Portuguese find that it serves excellently the purpose of a mackintosh. It is made entirely of straw, and the wet runs down the individual straws, and so drops to the ground.

Trying a case over the telephone is the novel method adopted by a New York coroner in order to save time. Mr. Heilenstein, a coroner, took the evidence of witnesses, listened to arguments and gave his decision without leaving his study chair.

The merits of bones as indicators of fair or foul weather have been vouched for by the captain of an Italian steamer carrying a cargo of bones from the South American port of Buenos Ayres to New York. When the ship was sailing toward a storm recently, the skipper stated, the bones creaked and moaned, and when fair weather was ahead they were silent again.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and heard that it had helped other suffering women so I felt sure it would do me good. Sure enough it did. The first bottle helped me and now I am a strong and well woman. I would not be without it in the house."—Mrs. ANNA HIGGINS, 1125 Agency St., Burlington, Iowa.

The Dramatic Love Story of a Poor Young Man Who Got Rich, From the Great Play Now Being Acted in New York

Now playing at Maxine Elliott's Theatre, N. Y. City, and the New Theatre, London.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By J. W. McCONAUGHY.

Copyright, 1912, by H. H. Frazee and James Montgomery.

PART I.—(Continued.)

"What are you going to do with that?" he demanded.

"YOU," replied Mr. Ives, with emphasis, "are going to send this to Brandon."

"Wait a minute!" protested Steve "That's too strong!"

Mr. Ives's sandy hedge of eyebrows came together over his nose. "Do you know what encouragement means to a man?" he demanded.

"Yes, I know," returned Steve, "and I know that Irishman. If he ever received that telegram he'd work his head off for the next two days."

"Isn't that exactly what you want?" cut in Mr. Ives.

"But I haven't paid Morgan his note—I haven't sold any stock!"

"But if this telegram puts him to work, and if he did strike gold you COULD pay the note and you COULD sell the stock, couldn't you?"

"Yes," admitted Steve, feeling a little dizzy.

"And," went on Mr. Ives crushingly, "if he isn't encouraged he surely won't make any great effort in the last two days?"

"No," admitted Steve, in a faint voice. Mr. Ives folded the telegram.

Ready Money

"Now, will you call Neil," he asked calmly. Steve called and Neil took the telegram, waiting expectantly for the money. Steve glanced at Mr. Ives, who was thinking of other things.

"Charge it," he said desperately to Neil bowed and departed.

"Besides, that telegram is true;" declared Mr. Ives with energy when Neil was out of earshot. "You're going to pay the note—you're going to sell the stock. I've been interested in you from the first day I met you, and I've always wanted to do something to prove it."

He took a wallet of generous size out of his coat pocket and counted out twenty bright gold bills on the table.

"There are twenty one-thousand dollar bills," he said quietly. "I'm buying that much stock. Now you can pay Morgan his twenty thousand dollars."

Steve felt himself twitching nervously as he stared from man to the money and back to the man.

"Do you really mean that" he said in a low but even voice.

Mr. Ives nodded carelessly toward the little stack of bills. "There's the money. Take it." Steve took it. "Look at it."

"I am looking at it," said Steve, a little unsteadily. His hands were shaking. "I can't believe it's true." He stared at Mr. Ives, who was smiling kindly. "I don't know what to say to you—you don't realize what this money means to me. It's come right out of heaven, that's all! Do you know what you've done?"

Mr. Ives shook his head. "I've done nothing," he said soberly.

"You've done something wonderful!" cried Steve, his voice thrumming with earnest, one and his whole face suddenly aglow with eagerness and energy. "It's made the whole world look different. I don't want to wish you any bad luck, but if you are ever in any trouble or need any help, no matter what it is or where you are, if you should ever want any one to go through for you, I want you to promise me you'll give me a chance to prove my gratitude—"

Mr. Ives gave him a keen, shrewd glance. "Do you feel that way about it?" he asked. Steve waved his hand as if to indicate that further protestations of his gratitude would but belittle that emotion.

"There's some one," he said with wonderful softness—"who, when she hears about this, is going to be the happiest girl in New York."

Mr. Ives did not share in the enthusiasm. "I wonder how far you would go?" he mused, his eyes still fixed on the young man's exultant face. Steve smiled on him, almost choking with joy.

"Try me some day," he suggested. "That's the best way to find out."

"I'll try you right now," said Mr. Ives, abruptly. "Supposing that I was in a lot of trouble—supposing that I was arrested."

"What would you be arrested for?" demanded Steve, in smiling scorn.

"Well, we'll say I was arrested for stealing."

"That's impossible," said Steve lightly.

"If I was arrested for stealing," pursued the other evenly, "and you could come to the front and clear me—would you do it?"

Steve began to feel that there was something more than mere idle speculation as the depths of his gratitude behind all this, and he stared at Mr. Ives doubtfully.

"That's hard to answer," he said at last.

"If ever you need any help," quoted Mr. Ives, very deliberately, "no matter what it is or where you are—if you should ever want any one to go through for you, I want you to promise me that you'll give me a chance to prove your gratitude. Did you say that?"

"Yes," he declared. "Even then I would."

"That's better," exclaimed Mr. Ives heartily, to Steve's immense relief. "Well, don't worry. I will never be arrested—for stealing." He paused and studied the young man's face for an instant before he went on. "I'm going to make you a proposition, and whether you accept it or not, I want you to promise me that you will never repeat it. Will you do that?"

"Yes," was the instant reply.

An Amazing Story

"Good! Here's another case: Supposing I was a counterfeiter—suppose that my cousin here tonight and buying your stock was a scheme of mine to show you how easy it was to pass them? Here?" He fished out two more bills and held them toward Steve. "Here are two bills made by the government." Steve dropped the package of money on the table and stared at it with dull eyes. Then he suddenly poured himself a large drink of whiskey and drank it. Mr. Ives in the meantime took two bills out of the pile.

"Here are two of MINE!" he went on cheerfully, while Steve watched with a sort of dazed interest, "THESE were made by the government." He shuffled them like a three-card monte gambler and dropped them on the table. "Now pick out the good bills and they are yours." Steve bent over mechanically, stared for a few seconds and shook his head.

"It's impossible!" declared Mr. Ives with the warmth of an enthusiast. "An expert could not tell the difference! I have spent years to make this bill superior to the original! I was a printer. I was a paper maker—an expert steel and copper engraver. For thirty years I've been reading, writing, thinking, talking money! I have reproduced the currency of England, France, Germany. I returned six weeks ago. Half of that time I've been watching you. You have every element I require. You will be my partner!"

Out came the wallet and another wad of bills joined those already on the table.

"There is $50,000 to start with!" he cried, tapping the pile with his finger. "I made it in thousand dollar bills because not one man out of a hundred has ever seen one. You will look as if you had never seen anything else. With your friends, with your position, it will be a triumph. Take them!"

He forced the bills into Steve's hands. Steve rose slowly with the bills still clutched in his fingers. His eyes sparkled, but Mr. Ives apparently was unmoved.

"Wait a moment!" the young man almost hissed. "Do you think because I am broke and helpless that I will stoop to such infamy? Do you think because I am getting you like that? Do you mean that you want me to pass this money among my friends—get good money in return and divide with you?"

Mr. Ives smiled for an instant and then turned grave and earnest.

"You won't pass it," he explained softly. "If you've got the money you don't have to spend it—all you have to do is to show it. It takes money to get money and you can't get it without it. What chance have you got without it? Who is going to have faith in what you've got to sell if what you've got to sell isn't getting you anything? But if they see that it's getting you everything — they'll fight to get in on it! You know what a good suit of clothes gets you—a pleasant 'Good morning!' Well, people can see a thousand dollar bill further than anything of the size in the world—and seeing is believing is all there is to it! I used to pass it, and that's why I can't do now what I want to do. You know; but they don't know you, and if you'll give me 50 per cent. of all that money attracts to you I'll be a rich man!"

Stock Prices; Financial News

Boston and New York Markets Open Irregular, but Grow Stronger in First Hour.

STATE STREET, Oct. 22.—Opening—The local stock market opened fairly active with prices irregular. The trading was mostly in small lots and the prices ranged from unchanged to ⅛ point below Monday night's closing. Wolverine made a new low for the year when several small lots were sold at 71. Copper ranged from 37 to 37⅛. Amalgamated opened ⅛ off, while Calumet & Arizona, North Butte, East Butte and Shannon were unchanged.

Irregularity prevailed in the New York stock market at the opening today. A better tone, however, was reflected from the foreign markets. The best gain was made by Lehigh Valley, which rose one point to 175¾, but later this stock sold off ¾.

Southern Pacific was also purchased in a professional movement advancing ⅝. United States Steel common, after opening ¼ up, advanced ¼ additional. Canadian Pacific started off at 263, a loss of ½ over yesterday's final; later it went to 264¼. Amalgamated Copper was unchanged, but American Smelting lost ½; Union Pacific and Erie each rose ⅛. Missouri Pacific rose ¼. The Curb was easy. There was less pressure on Americans in London.

London Copper Metal.

London copper warrants were off again this morning. The market opened weak, but later became firm with spot off 5s, and futures off 6s. 3d.

The London 2 p. m. prices showed that American securities were considerably below last night's New York closing prices. Canadian Pacific lost the most, its decline being 1⅝, while practically all the other rails were fractionally lower. The copper bars held up very well considering the weakness in the London copper warrants.

Cotton Market.

A bullish weather map caused the cotton market to open 9 to 12 points higher today. Buying was more persistent and selling less aggressive than usual during the past few days. Futures were steady in Liverpool and spot there was active. Cables were a little better than due.

News Briefs.

That Missouri Pacific is fast gaining the confidence of shippers is attested by the fact that the road is handling 35 per cent. more business than last year. In the fifteen weeks from the close of the last fiscal year to October 1 gross earnings increased to $18,455,000, an increase of $2,229,000 over the corresponding period of a year ago. Expenditures for betterments of the property deducted from earnings in the first two months of the year decreased over $200,000, but Missouri Pacific is still spending the large proportion of 35 per cent. of gross returns for maintenance. These expenditures are not as large as a year ago simply because 'physical requirements are not as heavy. Missouri Pacific should continue to show excellent earnings. Crops in the road's territory are tremendously big and the outlook is excellent in every respect.

There have been rumors that there has been a change in the Wabash reorganization plans favorable to Missouri Pacific (a large holder of Wabash stocks) whereby the stock will be assessed more lightly and the bonds have to stand a greater proportion of the reorganization burden. This is authoritively denied. The present probability is that Wabash preferred and common stocks will be assessed $40 each, and Wabash refunding bonds will receive 50 per cent. in new preferred stock and 50 per cent. in cash or new bonds, but this latter is still under discussion in the committee, as some of the members are dealtous of giving bondholders 100 per cent. in preferred stock without any cash or new bonds.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

So far as automobile racing is concerned, its first season in the list has proven somewhat disastrous to Rockingham, especially to weather conditions. Its first race, postponed from May 30 to the following Saturday, was a big success, but its last race, postponed from Columbus Day to last Saturday, had the weather to blame.

There is some talk of making a two and one-half mile track at Rockingham and next year try to get some of the big events. Whether they build a two and one-half mile track around Rockingham or not they will have to make certain changes in the present racing surface in order to insure the attendance of the more best class of drivers. Their stretches are wide enough, but the turns are virtually flat, extremely dangerous for fast work and of a character the best-known of motor drivers shun.

A two and one-half mile track at Rockingham or even at Readville for that matter would be made to pay fully as well as does the big Indianapolis track. Manager Kerr of the Rockingham Park Association has proven his ability to work against the hardest kind of hard luck. With a race June 17, another could be held in the Fall just after the close of the Grand Prize or Vanderbilt cup race. Think the thing over, gentlemen of Rockingham.

Charles J. Glidden, who is having a Glidden Tour all his own with his well-known Maxwell car, the type and make of car which won the trophy a year ago, is now in Alabama. Yesterday Mr. Glidden was in Sheffield, Ala., driving there from Nashville, a distance of 125 miles. On this trip Mr. Glidden battled with sticky, red clay which caused much skidding, but, nevertheless, he brought the Maxwell car to his destination on time.

The electrical turntable, upon which is mounted one of the 1915 Buick runabouts displayed in the Massachusetts avenue window of the Buick Company, forms one of the most interesting and attractive of the many worthy displays in the Buick automobile show, which is being held by that company this week. Briefly, one of the Buick models for the 1913 season is shown at the salesroom. The show will continue each day of this week. The show rooms will be open until 10 o'clock in the evening.

Ladies with the fruits of its skirmish into the wilds of Maine, the Farm Club returned to Boston at peace with the world and thoroughly satisfied that of all the organizations that answer the call of the wild none can excel this famous local organization.

C. P. Rockwell, New England manager of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company, is at his old home in Chester, Ct., recuperating after the most strenuous and most successful history of the Rambler organization in the Boston and New England. Charles O. Hart, the factory representative in Iowa, Gerry Decou, factory superintendent, and George Cox, another salesman from the factory, have been visiting the local branch during the past week.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 22.—Charles J. Glidden's trip from Detroit to New Orleans in the interest of the next Glidden tour has awakened motorists of the South, and it is expected more than half the contestants next June will represent Southern cities. Forty entries have been promised. Today's run of the tourists from Rogers Springs to Memphis was the hardest of the trip, owing to washouts. Glidden's Maxwell and the 1911 winner which accompanies him have made perfect runs.

Taft and Family On Poland Springs Trip Tomorrow

President Taft will leave Beverly tomorrow for Poland Springs. He will return to Beverly on Friday. On the trip which the President will be Mrs. Taft and Miss Helen Taft. Secretary Knox, who is due to arrive in Beverly tomorrow is also making this special trip to talk over matters pertaining to the Panama Canal.

On the way to Poland Springs the party will stop at the Portsmouth Navy Yard. The party is to remain in Poland Springs Wednesday, and Thursday they will return to Beverly.

The President is to dedicate a building in Cambridge Springs, Pa., on Saturday.

This is the last week of the President's stay in Massachusetts, as on leaving Portland he leaves for the Winter. Mrs. Taft and Miss Helen Taft will remain in Beverly till November 2.

President Taft will receive the election returns in his home city, Cincinnati, where he will go to cast his vote.

The only caller on the President this afternoon was the Rev. J. E. Malanese of Lawrence, who talked over the industrial conditions in that city.

HEARST CABLES HIS SYMPATHY TO COL. ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The following cable was received yesterday:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Oyster Bay:

LONDON, Oct. 15.—I learn with sincerest regret of your injury. Every thoughtful American realizes how great a force you exercise throughout the country in support of popular rights and political liberties. All must hope as I do that neither this regrettable accident nor any other occurrence will ever interfere with your effective and essential work along these progressive and patriotic lines.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

REPORT BREAKS AT TWO POSTOFFICES

Chief Postal Inspector Letherman of Boston was notified today of postoffice robberies at Eliot, Me., and at West Buxton, Me. The postoffice safe was blown up and all stamps and funds were stolen. The amount was not stated.

Have You Twenty-Five Friends?

Each Will Give You 3,500 Votes

But You Must Ask Them First If You Want Their Subscriptions.

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Have you twenty-five friends?

Every candidate ought to have.

And every one of these twenty-five friends will give you a twelve-months subscription to the Sunday AMERICAN—if you will but ask them.

And the beauty of it is that it will not cost anyone a cent, not a penny to help you.

Vote coupons are all right—and they help some—but it takes a long while to get 3,000 of them.

You can get ten twelve-months' subscriptions while you are collecting 3,500 coupons.

And one twelve-months' subscription equals 2,500 votes—what's the answer?

Why, simply that the way to invest your time—every spare minute of it—is to getting these all-important, highly valuable twelve months' subscriptions.

The winners will be the subscription getters. Make up your minds to that Right Now and—Act Accordingly.

In four weeks the vote list appears!

Time to Work Is Now.

These are the hap-making days for candidates. Work NOW helps your position in the race for $10,000 and also counts for the 100 Extra Cash prizes to be awarded in four weeks more.

Where could you get such a return for the same amount of work?

Who would pay you as the AMERICAN will for what you do in this contest?

Get in the lead now and you can take your time later.

Don't be discouraged if everybody doesn't fall all over themselves to help you, at first.

You must "take the skim milk with the cream." It's worth while!

Get into the contest in earnest! Determine to be a winner! You can, easily, if you have the "spunk."

Even if you don't get the first prize, you should surely get one that will repay you well for your effort.

Don't forget the Special Prizes. Remember that $1,545 in good hard cash will be given in four weeks more.

And these are only Extra Special rewards!

Fifteen hundred and one people will each get a substantial return for an investment of their spare time in the next eighteen weeks.

Five hundred will share big cash awards now.

Gibson Active Candidate.

Thomas E. Gibson of No. 65 Westville street, Dorchester, is one of the most active, earnest subscription getters in the contest.

For three years he has been employed with the Chandler & Barber Sundries shop on Summer street, Boston, and for six years previous to that with the A. S. Morse Hardware Company on Commercial street.

He is a graduate of the Henry L. Pierce School in Dorchester, and is busily every minute of every day.

He says: "If I don't win the $10,000, it won't be because of lack of effort on my part. I am putting in my spare time, all of it, and I propose to let no one day go over my head between now and February 28 without procuring at least one subscription to the Sunday AMERICAN. This is a 'finish fight,' with me and I'll be there at the finish when the race is over."

Next Sunday we will print an entire page of candidates' pictures. The best way in the world to let everyone know you are a candidate for the $10,000 is to have your picture among those printed next Sunday.

If you haven't a suitable picture come in and get an order for one which will entitle you to a sitting at the Otto Sarony Company, No. 146 Tremont street, Boston. If unable to call for this order, send for it by mail.

The first vote list will appear IMMEDIATELY after the close of the big Special Offer. Only subscriptions and votes received up to Nov. 30th at 10 p. m. will be counted in compiling this first list. This means now or never in the race for

The Depth and Breadth of Wilson's Democracy

When Governor Wilson said at Carnegie Hall in New York on Saturday night, "I don't want to be the ruler of the people; I want to be the spokesman of the people," the great audience cheered, and then cheered and cheered again. The speaker had intended to say more. But there was no need. He stopped short. He had uttered the most intimate word of that Democratic faith that binds him to the electorate.

In Wilson the Democracy of Thomas Jefferson revives and breathes again. Wilson is thorough. He goes to the root of the matter. He refuses to believe that some men are born saddled and bridled, and others booted and spurred.

Democratic government, according to Wilson, is not an elective despotism, tempered by a time-limit. It is the organized energy and intelligence of the whole people. It does not abide in capitols; it pervades society, like the nerve-system of the human body. The Democracy of Wilson would make every schoolhouse a centre of governmental power.

Wilson insists that his campaign is a life-and-death struggle for real democracy—that we stand at the parting of the ways. He insists that Taft and Roosevelt both draw toward an undemocratic kind of government—a government that assumes to take care of the people. He insists that that kind of government has always—with the best intentions in the world—enslaved and impoverished the people.

Wilson understands that this age is different from the age of Jefferson—that the supreme question now is the question of economic liberty, in face of the tariff and the trusts.

Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt seem to live under the illusion that tariff privileges and trust monopolies can be made innocuous by being kept under the eye of wise and good rulers at Washington.

Wilson insists that privileges should be utterly abolished and that private monopolies are absolutely intolerable.

Wilson says he is not striving for "free trade or anything that remotely resembles free trade," because it is impossible to do away with imposts so long as the expenses of the Federal Government must be raised by indirect taxation. He does not object to the protection that makes life easier in America, but only to the tariff privileges that make life harder. He would clean the tariff schedules of all the lobby larcenies and the subsidies of cunning and sloth.

Wilson is no enemy of big business—the kind that grows big because big men are behind it. He abhors the kind of business that is flatulent and dropsical with fraudulent finance. He thinks—and thinks rightly—that there are many businesses in this country that are big because the men behind them are little—and have not scrupled to do pusillanimous things.

Mr. Wilson said on Friday, in Pittsburgh, that some of these small men should be forcibly secluded, so that they may have leisure and quiet to think larger thoughts. This, too, was a true word of the spokesman.

The regulation of competition, for which Mr. Wilson contends, means that a sharp distinction should be made between two very different kinds of competition. It is all right that private persons should compete with each other for power to serve the public; it is all wrong that they should compete with each other for power to tax the public.

Governor Wilson is speaking a language familiar to the American people when he reminds us that the fluent and on-going life of democracy depends upon the ceaseless competition of all individuals to excel in the service of the commonwealth.

It is not to be inferred from this principle that vast, highly organized and efficient business concerns—when they arise in the natural course of industrial evolution—are to be broken up into warring factions. On the contrary, the true inference is that such concerns should be treated as if they were in practical effect public institutions.

They should be reorganized on such a basis that their directors and managers can find increased profit and personal promotion only in improving the services they render to the public.

The system of legalized monopoly proposed by men like Mr. George W. Perkins is an offence and peril to democracy, because it would leave the gigantic industrial organizations private in their motive and private in the method of their operation. They would have an interest adverse to the public interest, and they would have a power that no public power could permanently withstand.

This newspaper has steadily maintained that where prices cease to be regulated by competition they should be limited by law; that where business risks have been eliminated dividends should be cut to the current cost of working capital, and that when a corporation ceases to be competitive it must cease to be private, for the only kind of monopoly that is tolerable in a free country is a public monopoly.

This is the logic of Wilson's democracy. It is also the prevalent purpose of the American people.

In carrying this purpose into effect Wilson will act, not as the master of the people, but as their lucid and indissuadable spokesman.

By All Means a Naval Reserve

It grows naturally out of the recent great assembly of the fleet in New York, and at other naval stations, that there should be a movement for the establishment of a National Naval Reserve. It is astonishing that such an organization should not have been formed before.

What the G. A. R. is to the soldier and the ex-soldier of the regular army, the Naval Reserve should be to the sailors, past and present, of our Republic.

The preservation of the traditions, associations and history of the navy, the memories of its heroes and sailors, the organized strength which will represent the navy in our political affairs, and the esprit de corps of the navy in our national affairs all demand an organization strong in numbers and representative in character.

But there is a more practical side to this demand. It is officially stated that only 30 per cent. of the complement of a man of war are skilled men, and that in time of war the sudden imperative demand for new men can be filled only by men who have had some sort of training in the work of the navy. There are thousands of men in the country who have had this training and the history of the Republic justifies the belief that in emergency these Americans would give their services to their country. But to be effective, these men must be found and organized in time of peace. This is the practical Naval Reserve.

The AMERICAN sincerely hopes that men throughout the Republic will co-operate with the Navy Department at Washington, which has sent out a request that every man honorably discharged from the navy send his address, and that those who know of retired sailors will send their addresses to the Department.

The Naval Reserve will be a new and noble unit in the organized patriotism of the country.

A KNOWLEDGE of human nature is a wonderful thing! If you were to talk to some one wise in salesmanship—the sort of salesmanship dignified by being called scientific—you would learn that to sell goods at a profit you must know your own powers, know your goods, and know those to whom you wish to sell.

You see, if you don't know your prospective customers you can not know how to approach them, what to offer them that will win their confidence, what it is that they really need.

All this is but an introduction to a letter from Miss Mary Andrews of Beverly. She tells of a friend who is blessed with a knowledge of her own sex. In addition to that I am thinking that she is also just a wee bit of an artist. Just why I say these things about her you will understand when you read the following letter:

Shampoos and Tea

There is an ambitious woman who makes extra money by giving shampoos at her home. She has an attractive, sunny backyard, where she brings her customers to have their hair dried.

While her first custoher, a neighbor, was sitting comfortably in a chair reading, the sun and wind doing the work of drying the hair, a cup of delicious tea and biscuits were brought out to her.

That was four months ago. Today this woman has as many customers as she can take care of. Every two weeks a party of women go to have their hair done—and also to get a cup of very good tea. It is laughingly being said that the women of that particular town have cleaner heads than in any other.

My friend declares if she ever grows tired of washing hair she'll open a tea room. She is beginning to think her tea is getting more fame than her shampoos.

Her price is fifty cents. She uses only castile soap and water. Including cost of tea, she says her profit is forty cents, or a little more, on every customer.

Beverly. MARY ANDREWS.

Makes May Baskets

I have been very successful in earning "pin money" for the numerous little extras a girl likes to have by making May baskets.

Every Spring I visit several department stores in a nearby city and solicit orders for all styles and sizes of baskets, ranging from 20 cents to $1. I agree to take back all baskets which are unsold at the end of May, and allow the stores 20 per cent for all which are disposed of.

One store allows me a discount on all material such as crepe and tissue paper, wire, cardboard and paste which I purchase, and this is greatly appreciated. Usually I begin preparations shortly after Christmas, devoting two or three hours daily to the making of boxes, flowers for trimming, etc.

The first of May the baskets are shipped by express to the city. The work is not only profitable but fascinating.

For three years I have earned between $50 and $75 doing this work.

Babies' Bibs

I acquire quite a little income each week doring my spare time, by making babies' bibs.

I buy a 12½c. Turkish towel and make six even divides. I then bind the edges with some remnants of white cloth that I found around, and allow a small piece for strings. I sell these bibs for two for 15c., and I buy ten towels per week, netting $1.20 every week. They sell very fast.

Mattress Ticks

I am making mattress ticks for a furniture house. As I get 50c each for full size and 35c for ¾ size, I do pretty well

THE THREE TENSES

By William F. Kirk

WHAT do we know of the wondrous scheme
That sages and serfs have tried to know?
Why do we look at the stars that gleam
At the end of a sad day's afterglow?
Why gaze we up and never below?
All Logic tries for replies—and misses.
But this is so, and shall ever be so.
The Future applauds; the dead Past hisses!

Future and Past—what an ill-matched team!
Biting and fighting to and fro.
Always a mock and a menace they seem
To the Present that sees them come and go.
The Present is neither fast nor slow;
She is just a dream, like a sunbeam's kisses,
But she senses this, as we know a foe:
The Future applauds; the dead Past hisses!

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

"THE PROHIBITION QUESTION"

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The Boston AMERICAN of Friday, October 18, contained an article by Garrett P. Serviss on "The Prohibition Question," in which he says, concerning French wine drinking and American Prohibitionists, these words: "What the well-meaning, ignorant Prohibitionists need is to pass a few months in France, living as people who know proper virtues and the proper use of wine live."

In reply to the insinuation that American Prohibitionists are ignorant as to conditions in wine-drinking France, let me say that more than one party Prohibitionist has lived in France just as Mr. Serviss suggests. We are not an ignorant lot of dreamers. Prohibitionists are leaders in this very type of investigation. What are the results gleaned from France itself?

Mr. Serviss says the French people "know proper virtues." He connects this knowledge of "proper virtues" with "the proper use of wine." Mr. Serviss knows as well as any ordinary American Prohibitionist that France as regards population is a "dying nation." The birth rate is only a little ahead of the death rate. Scientists assert that this sterility and infant mortality is largely due to the enormous consumption of alcoholic wines.

Mr. Serviss says that a wine-drinking population knows all "proper virtues." But the French Academy of Moral Science is distressed at the great growth of juvenile crime in France and confesses that this type of criminality is one of the worst of the cancers eating out the vitals of present-day French life. Page after page of French "dailies" is filled with the crime stories of the night before—crimes committed by young men, adolescents or children.

What is the cause of this growing army of criminal youth in France? Let Frenchmen on the spot tell Mr. Serviss and the readers of the Boston AMERICAN. M. de Casabianca, a learned Parisian judge, says the first and most important cause is "the proper use of wine"? Oh, no. He attributes it to the increasing use of alcohol in wine beverages. The great Parisian criminal lawyer, M. Henri Robert, confirms this opinion of the learned Judge by saying the present wave of crime in France is due to "the corrupting advance of alcohol." And all this in a wine-drinking nation!

Personally I am one of the "well meaning" Prohibitionists referred to by Mr. Serviss. I resent the charge against my fellow party men that we are "ignorant Prohibitionists." There are 250,000 of us in the United States, and it will take more than all the evidence Mr. Serviss can collect in all wine-drinking France, which knows all "the proper virtues" but is a "dying nation" with a growing army of ruined boys to convince us that we are 250,000 fools.
